Trucker, Matthews Girl Die In Crash

Flyers Spirits High

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White whirled into the second day of their marathon space mission today, their spirits high and their flight plan back on schedule after some hectic early hours during which White strolled in space.

The Mission Control Center said everything appeared favorable for the Gemini 4 spacecraft to complete its full 97-hour, 50-minute mission.

If there are no hitches, America's longest manned space flight will end at 12:06 p.m. Monday with a parachute splashdown in the Atlantic Ocean 400 miles southwest of Bermuda.

White described as "vivid blue" the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. He said he clearly saw Houston and Galveston Bay as he floated on the end of a golden lifeline more than 100 miles above the earth.

He said he even saw Clear Lake, about 3 miles long and 1½ miles wide, near the Houston homes of both astronauts.

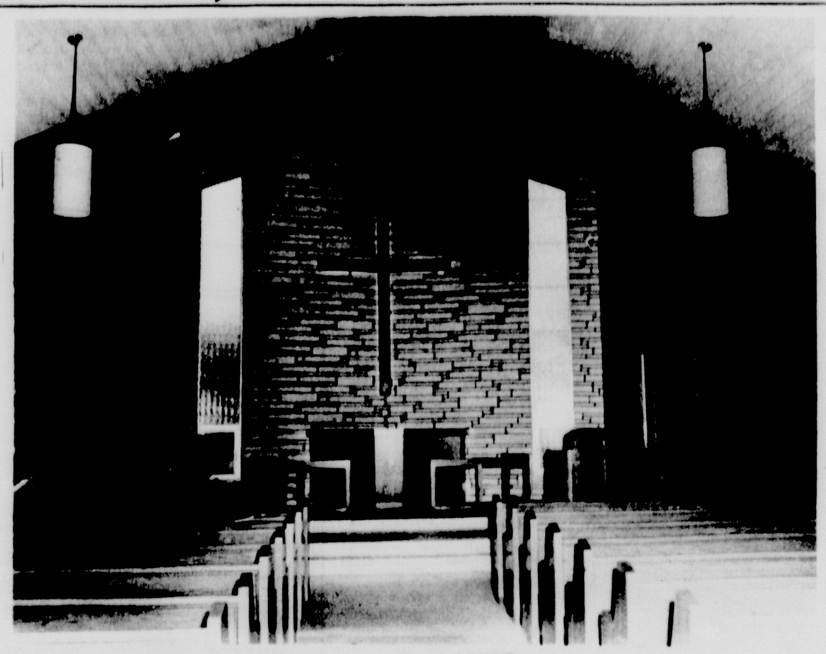

White said the jet-gun maneuvering unit he used made it much easier to move about outside the capsule. When he wasn't using it, he said, he had difficulty getting around.

White also said he had walked on the equipment section of the Gemini 4 during his excursion.

"It looked like I was right on top of it," he said, "It's kinda hard to get traction."

Then Grissom passed on some news from home. He reported that the Hawks, a Pee-Wee League baseball team for

Lilbourn Scouts Will Camp Out

LILBOURN -- Scouts from Lilbourn's troop 50 with New Madrid Scouts will board a bus at the high school at 12:45 p.m., June 20 on their way for a week's excursion at Camp Lewellan near Silva.

The Scouts will be accompanied by Owen J. Taul, high school principal and Scoutmaster of Troop 50.

Taul reports that since 1941 Lilbourn Scouts have been experiencing the week's encampment each year at Lewellan. He said that this year some of the boys who will make the trip are following in their father's footsteps.

The scoutmaster emphasized that while the camp-out is designed for the boys' pleasure, the week is primarily one of Scout work with each youngster given an opportunity to advance in rank, and leadership. Merit badges may be earned in many areas some of which would be difficult to earn at home.

Each year, the Order of the Arrow call-out ceremony highlights the week's encampment. Scouts who are called-out to be intiated and to receive this honor exemplify the highest qualities of scouting. Taul reports that two Scouts from Lilbourn's troop will be called out.

Church Will Be Dedicated

MATTHEWS -- The new Christ Lutheran church building will be dedicated Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with the Rev. Harold Belsheim, pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, as speaker.

The building has a seating capacity of 150, Sunday School rooms and a large meeting room with an adjoining kitchen. The building has floor space of 4,000 square feet, and is paneled in dark and light mahogany color. It has a small balcony for a choir with a seating capacity of 50. The outside walls are of buff brick with stained glass windows.

The building is air-conditioned, has a sound system and a new organ. Construction began Aug. 1, and was completed on June 1. Bernie Sims is the contractor, and Buchmueller and Whitworth and Associates the architects.

The flooring is of a new type tiling. The material is laid in a clear liquid form. After drying plastics chips are applied to the surface and the floor is polished.

The first church was organized in a quonset hut in 1948, under the leadership of W. A. Gemeinhardt and others, and has been served by the Concordia Lutheran Church pastor in Sikeston for 17 years. Pastors included Rev. Earl Weis, 1948-54; Rev. Eugene Lauterbach, 1954-60, and the Rev. Mr.

Beatle Haircut On Way Out

NEW YORK AP -- A note for cringing parents and graying school principals: it looks as though the phenomenon known as the Beatle haircut may be on its way out.

An Associated Press survey showed today that long, stringy hair is going the way of all fads and, in this case, is winding up on barber shop or home bathroom floors.

The reasons are as numerous as the number of heads that once wore long hair. A teenager in Phoenix, Ariz., said it's just too hot.

"And there are too many singing groups like the Beatles now," he said. "It's no novelty."

An inspection of schoolboy styles around Dallas, Tex., showed the new long - hairs never had an influence there, even with the scores of boys who play in Beatle-type combos.

"The long-hair style is very much on the decline since the Beatles have quieted down and are staying away from this country," said Bill Evans, vice principal at Westport High School in Kansas City. He attributes the about - face to physical education instructors who insist athletes be shorn.

In Florida, there's a basketball team captain, Mike Chase, who must agree. Last December, Miami - Dade Junior College Coach Bill Alheim benched Chase for looking like a refugee from a mop shop, and Miami-Dade lost its next game without Chase who had been averaging 24 points per contest.

However, the survey showed that in some Florida areas the long-hair fad still persists. Another shaggy top region is Southern California where surfers and entertainers go for the style. There, something new has been added: bleached long hair.

Must Win On Ground

WASHINGTON AP -- Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey says air strikes alone won't do the job and the war in Viet Nam will have to be won on the ground by South Vietnamese forces.

Humphrey said in an Associated Press interview he believes that South Vietnamese fighting units -- given sufficient time--can subdue their Communist opponents.

He said he thinks the Viet Cong will call it quits once the Communists become convinced the United States is determined to stay to the end in South Viet Nam.

Humphrey said that while a year or two ago he had deep concern over U. S. involvement in the area he now strongly supports the kind of action President Johnson has taken there.

"I'm still concerned, but I know what we're doing is what we have to do," he said.

Classes of competition scheduled to be held are pony class, weaving wands, country pleasure, barrel race, youth horsemanship, western pleasure, plug speed race, and calf roping.

This year's show is sanctioned by the Mo-Ark Horse Show and Rodeo circuit. Judges will be selected from a group approved by this organization.

Airmen Die in Crash

The tanker was on a routine mission and approaching a Walker AFB runway when the accident occurred, base spokesmen said.

Mother Will See Two Academy Graduations

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- Weather permitting, Mrs. Raymond W. Vogel Jr. will see two of her sons graduate next Wednesday in separate ceremonies at the military and naval academies.

"Everybody kept saying, 'no, no, no, it can't be done'," Mrs. Vogel, of Arlington, Va., says. "But I don't believe anything is impossible."

So after five months of determined effort, she has arranged for Timothy J. Vogel to receive his diploma in an early morning ceremony at West Point, N. Y.

This will give her time to fly to Annapolis for the 11 a.m. exercises where her youngest son, Frederick J. Vogel, will be graduated.

Also making the trip will be Rear Adm. and Mrs. Frederick James Brush, also of Arlington, who have sons graduating from both service academies. Brush is assistant chief of naval operations for logistics.

He is assigned to the Pentagon, where Mrs. Vogel works in the Office of Naval Intelligence.

At least one other couple, Mr. and Mrs. H. Reed Laughlin of Port Huron, Mich., solved the same problem by having each parent attend one ceremony. Cadet Frederick L. Laughlin will be commissioned an Army lieutenant. Midshipman Gary R. Laughlin will become a Navy ensign.

Mrs. Vogel's husband was a naval commander killed in action in the Korean War.

Unable to persuade either to change the time, she came up with the idea of a special ceremony at one school. As a result, Cadet Vogel and Cadet William J. Brush will be awarded diplomas early Wednesday morning at West Point.

3-Vehicle Pileup Near City

In a car-truck collision at the junction of Highway 61 and Route H, eight miles south of Sikeston, during a rainstorm last night at 9:20 p.m., an unidentified man was burned to death, and Miss Mary Jo Myers, 17, route two Matthews, was fatally hurt. Miss Myers died today at 8 a.m. in the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Carroll Lee Rinehart, 42, Belleville, Ill., was driving south on Highway 61, at the Matthews-East Prairie highway junction, in an International tractor - trailer, when a 1951 Chevrolet, driven by Miss Myers pulled out on Highway 61 from Route H, into the path of the large cattle truck.

At the same time a 1965 Ford pickup, presumed to have been traveling north and driven by an unidentified man, with an Indiana truck license, was struck broadside by the International truck. This caused the pickup truck to catch fire and be destroyed. The driver of the pickup was trapped in his cab and burned to death.

Rinehart was not injured.

The driver of the International truck told the state patrol he did not see the small truck, as the truck lights were knocked out when it struck the Myers car and jack-knifed, the cab ending up in the northbound lane and the trailer in the southbound lane.

Traffic was blocked until midnight, and rerouted from the Noxall road through Matthews.

The body of the Indiana man was taken to the Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid, awaiting identification, according to Coroner Leo Hedgepeth, of New Madrid county. An effort was being made to identify him through Indiana plates on the vehicle.

Miss Myers was born March 4, 1948, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Myers, route two, Matthews. She was a student at Matthews high school, and a member of the Nazarene Church.

Surviving besides her parents are three sisters, Mrs. Spatsie Payne, Peoria, Ill., Misses Patsie and Terry Myers and two brothers, James R. Myers, Jr., and Tulley John Myers.

Second Crash At Scene

A second highway accident occurred last night at 9:55 p.m. a half mile from junction of Highway 80 and 61, the scene of an earlier tragedy.

Melvin Cobb, Benton Harbor, Mich., was driving south on Highway 61, and slowed down for traffic passing the first wreckage, when his car was struck by a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Euell Lovell, 29, Blytheville, Ark.

Injured was Ellia Lovell, 23, a passenger in the second car, who was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital and later released.

Plumbers Go Out On Strike

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 318, have gone on strike in a dispute over wages. Their two - year contract expired Tuesday.

Most of the Cape Girardeau contractors are on strike, as well as several shops in Farmington and Ste. Genevieve. In Sikeston only one firm has employes belonging to the union.

The dispute is over basic wage differences, according to a Cape Girardeau member, who said the plumbers had asked $1.15 per hour in wage increases over a three-year period, with the contractors first offer being a 65 cents per hour increase. A compromise was offered by the contractors raising it to 90 cents per hour spread over three years.

The union wants a 25-cent increase the first year, 40 cents the second and 50 cents the third year. The contractors have offered 20 cents, 30 cents and 40 cents per hour over three years. The wage sale for union plumbers is now $4.26 per hour.

There was no immediate effect on large construction work in Cape Girardeau, including school and hospital annex building.

Fighting Heavy In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- Heavy ground fighting continued across South Viet Nam today and government casualties for today and Thursday rose to at least 239 killed, missing or wounded.

Vietnamese troops were caught in two more Communist ambushes, one a followup action by the Reds to an earlier ambush near Lao Thien, about 150 miles northeast of Saigon.

Casualties in the first ambush of a six-vehicle convoy Thursday totaled 15 government troops killed, 15 wounded and 15 missing. Two armored cars were destroyed, two trucks damaged and two machine guns lost. Communist losses were not known.

A relief force sent in a few hours later was hit about seven miles northeast of the first action. The government losses in this engagement were nine killed and 14 wounded. Planes and artillery fire finally routed the guerrillas.

Another ambush occurred near Kontum, about 285 miles northeast of Saigon, where a six-truck convoy was on a food pickup mission. A military spokesman said first reports listed 12 Vietnamese killed and nine missing. There were no reports of Communist losses.

President Tells Russian People U.S. Wants Peace

CHICAGO (AP) — President Johnson has told the people of the Soviet Union he wants them to withdraw support of aggression and subversion and join the United States in a common search for peace.

Appearing Thursday night before several thousand Cook County Democrats who paid $100 a plate to hear him deliver his first on-the-record speech to a political audience since the November election, Johnson said at the outset: "I do not believe this is an appropriate place tonight for partisanship."

Declaring that the peace of mankind transcends political considerations, Johnson said he had this message for the people of the Soviet Union: "There is no American interest in conflict with the Soviet people anywhere. And no true Soviet interest is going to be served by the support of aggression or subversion anywhere in the world.

"We of the United States of America stand ready tonight, as always, to go with you onto the fields of peace."

However, the applause seemed even noisier when the President announced later in his speech that he had ordered the withdrawal of the 2,100 Marines still in the Dominican Republic.

Johnson said the nation's purpose in Santo Domingo and elsewhere "is — and will always be —to serve the peace of mankind."

In an apparent effort to contrast his recent policies with those followed by many countries prior to World War II, Johnson said:

"In the 1930s, we made our fate not by what we did but by what we failed to do. We propelled ourselves —and all mankind — toward tragedy, not by decisiveness but by vacillation, not by determination and resolution but by hesitancy and irresolution, not by action but by inaction."

He asserted "there just must be no such failure in the 1960s."

Money Bills Study Ends

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee finished its study of the money bills Thursday for operation of Missouri's government in the coming fiscal year.

The bills, totaling $356 million in general revenue, were reported into the Senate in a skeleton session and will be ready for Senate debate, perhaps next week.

The usual procedure, however, is that appropriations wind up in a joint conference to work out the differences between the Senate and House.

The total is about $4.3 million less than the House approved and about $5.9 million less than Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended last January.

The committee figures do not include special fee funds or matching federal funds.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said there were few substantial changes made in the bills.

The committee added $2,185,000 for the University of Missouri. That included $800,000 for a new building to house administration of all four campuses and $750,000 for a mathematics systems and computer building for which federal aid will be available.

Longer Truck Bill Signed

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed two more bills today, including one to permit higher and longer trucks to ply Missouri's highways.

It would permit overall height of 13 1/2 feet instead of 12 1/2 feet. Length of a single unit truck could be 40 feet, a tractor-trailer 55 feet, an automobile transport 60 feet and a tractor with more than one trailer 65 feet.

Tradition Rules At Commencement

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- Class reunions and traditional honor luncheons will launch the 123rd annual commencement exercises at the University of Missouri next Monday.

The climax will come Tuesday night in Memorial Stadium when more than 1,800 graduates will receive their degrees.

Dr. Elmer Ellis, the University president, also will confer honorary degrees on three persons. They are Sen. Stuart Symington, who will be the commencement speaker; Dr. Blanche H. Dow, president of Cottey College in Nevada and Paul A. Gorman, New York, president o the Western Electric Co.

James M. Kemper, Sr., Kansas City banker, also was scheduled to receive an honorary degree, but is unable to attend. He will receive the honor at a later commencement.

In case of rain the exercises will be held in Brewer Field House.

Coin Bill Speeded

WASHINGTON AP -- Congress goes to work swiftly today on President Johnson's proposal to reduce sharply the amount of silver in U. S. coins.

A House Banking Committee hearing, with Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and Assistant Secretary Robert A. Wallace as witnesses, was scheduled less than 24 hours after Johnson's message reached Congress.

Johnson's legislation would substitute nickel-copper dimes and quarters for the present silver ones and reduce the silver content of the half-dollar.

Most members of Congress who commented appeared to favor the proposal, if only because they felt the shrinking supply of silver leaves the government little choice.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., Banking and Currency Committee chairman, said: "We have got to do something--and this is good money. Anything the government says is good for the payment of debts and taxes is good money, even if it is made of wood. You could even pay alimony with this."

Patman said he thinks the hearings can be brief, but that spokesman for the vending-machine industry may want to be heard. One of the problems of devising a substitute coinage is to find a combination of metals that will work in machines designed for silver soins.

Make no mistake about it. President Lyndon Johnson is a liberal and not a conservative. As a liberal he is more effective than any chief executive in the nation's history because he is an expert in getting Congress to do his bidding.

He accomplishes his result in Congress by an astute combination of flattery, browbeating, threats, reasoning and through the offers of plums and favors. He knows the members of Congress intimately and he has a profound understanding of the legislative process and how it operates. He knows how to make the system work for him and it does.

President Johnson also is an expert in carrying water on both shoulders. He has succeeded in fooling many Americans.

Recently he urged passage of legislation outlawing the ban on the union shop, which now gives states the right to adopt right-to-work laws. In doing this he fulfilled a campaign pledge.

His message to Congress showed no particular enthusiasm for the change and was hailed by conservatives as lukewarm.

President Johnson had succeeded once more in misleading many Americans. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz strongly endorsed congressional action to remove the ban. He could not have done this if President Johnson had not approved of his statement since he is an appointive cabinet officer in the Johnson administration.

President Johnson told a press conference Tuesday that he is sympathetic with reapportionment based on the United States Supreme Court's decision that both houses of state legislatures be set up on a population basis.

This prompted a rather peculiar reaction from Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, who behaved as if he didn't understand what was going on. Dirksen cast himself apparently deliberately as a greenhorn, newcomer to Congress instead of the old professional that he actually is. He may have done this to save face.

Although Johnson already was into the controversy up to his neck, Dirksen piously expressed the hope that he would not inject himself into it. "I don't think he ought to take a position," Dirksen said, ignoring the fact the President had done just that.

One of Senator Dirksen's colleagues has his eyes open. He is Sen. Paul Douglas, the Illinois Democrat, who called the President's statement that he was "generally sympathetic" with one-man, one-vote apportionment "very encouraging."

Our hat is off to President Johnson. When he can present himself as effectively deceiving the Republican majority leader in the United States Senate he really has pulled off a miracle -- a liberal miracle, of course.

The American people may prove themselves to be much smarter on the reapportionment issue than either President Johnson or Senator Douglas. We hope so.

Senator Dirksen is sponsoring a Constitutional amendment to authorize states to submit to their voters the issue of whether they want one house of their legislature to be elected on other than a population basis. He is giving poor leadership to this cause.

LET THE PRESIDENT KNOW

Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act has yet to become a major issue in the 89th Congress, but it mostly likely will before this session ends. Congress is not the only field of battle. It is partly in the mind of President Lyndon Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was elected in 1964 on a Democratic Party platform calling for repeal of 14(b), the Taft-Hartley provision which makes state "right-to-work" laws legal. In his State of the Union address in January, the President said he would "propose to Congress changes in the Taft-Hartley Act including Section 14(b)."

To date the President has not pressed for such change, but neither has he abandoned it. Observers have contended that he is biding his time until other legislative matters of higher priority are disposed of.

Thus there is still time to influence the President to overlook this promise by the use of reason and common sense.

Right -to-work laws, which prevail in 19 of the 50 states, do not prevent unionization. They simply prevent it from taking place through force and coercion. They say, in effect, that an individual in a unionized plant where a contract does not provide for a union shop can refuse to join a union, and that he will not have to make payments in lieu of dues to a union if he chooses to remain separate.

Labor's fight to repeal 14(b) is plainly an effort to gain control over the non-union worker, and to extract payment for him. The fight to retain 14(b) is supported by workers with a sense of independence as much as by business leaders.

The strange thing about President Johnson's support of the labor faction on this issue is that during his many years in Congress he backed such major union regulatory legislation as the Taft-Hartley Act, the Smith-Connally Act and the Landrum-Griffin Act. He voted to override President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947.

If he approved 14(b) so strongly in 1947, it is apparent that his change of position in 1965 is the result of labor pressure springing from its support of the Democratic ticket in the 1964 election. President Johnson also had the support of many non-union working people, and of many businessmen. Therefore he should be open to a hearing of their views, also.

Congress may be in a mood to do as the President bids on this matter. So those who argue for retaining 14(b) -- which has the sanction of the Supreme Court -- would do well to direct their messages to the White House as well as to their congressmen.

TRIBUTE TO "YORKE"

About once in every generation there appears some unusual or outstanding character in every profession, be it medicine or farming, news reporting or teaching.

These unusual characters have that undefinable something that sets them apart from the mob. At the same time they mix and mingle with the rest of us, and are accepted as one of the gang.

Bob Yorke was such an unusual character. He had traveled widely in his youth. He was a foot-slogging Dogface in World War I. He was a musician on a river steamer, the Goldenrod which plied the Ohio, and he also fired the furnaces of the steamer to augment his wages as a music maker.

Bob Yorke was a good newspaper reporter. He was at home with kids and with king-makers, and he had the happy faculty born of experience of sifting out tons of debris to reach the very small yield of pure gold which is part of any meeting, political or otherwise.

Bob died last Sunday morning, and his friends paid their last respects Tuesday afternoon. He was 74.

We will miss his gravelly voiced greeting, his shock of snow white hair, and that half-smoked, pungent cigar, the trademarks of this unusual reporter for the Daily Sikeston Standard.

TO JOIN OR NOT TO JOIN?

Great concern is voiced in Washington for the protection of the civil rights of individuals and minority groups.

But what of the right of the American worker to join -- or not to join -- a union? This particular issue doesn't seem to interest those who are in the forefront of the civil rights battle. There is a strange silence about the evil of compulsory unionism and its denial of individual civil and human rights. (Note, we didn't say evil of unionism but rather compulsory unionism.)

The great weight of the federal government is thrown into the human rights movement -- in schooling, in housing, in public accommodations. But what of the human rights of the man who, in order to hold a job, is forced to join an organization that may be diametrically opposed to his principles and views.

In nineteen states that man is protected by the right-to-work laws. And Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Act upholds the states in enacting these laws.

Now, the push is on in Washington to have Congress repeal 14 (b). We don't know what the legislators will do when the issue comes before them, but we do know what the American public thinks.

A national poll shows that the public is against repeal of 14 (b) by more than a two-to-one margin. In fact, nearly two-thirds of the adult public favor a national law making all union membership voluntary.

It is to be hoped that Congress gets the message.

As a result, a "Culture crisis" is developing.

"The Mason - Dixon line no longer constitutes an Iron curtain against the Affluent Society," says Prof. Rupert B. Vance, writing in the Virginia Quarterly Review.

He notes that personal income in the South rose from 46 per cent of the per capita average outside the South in 1929 to 69 per cent in 1963 --a gain of 23 percentage points in 34 years.

Although some observers believe it will take another 50 years for the South to reach economic parity with the rest of the country, it is already facing the problem of what to do with its new wealth. No purpose will be served, says Vance if the South retains Southern tradition in its "rigid orthodoxy."

"It is precisely this Southern way of life that the rest of the country and probably the rest of the world are getting sick and tired of hearing about," he says.

He challenges the South to "turn from preoccupation with its peculiar navel -- the Southern way of life -- to the pursuit of high culture."

The talent is there. Southern literature, for example, "has solidly established itself as the most important, the most talented, interesting and valuable in the United States."

An economic basis sufficient to furnish markets for culture is developing. What is needed now he says, is leadership from the new class of men of wealth and power as patrons of the arts.

He points to symphony orchestras to be supported in the larger cities, the need for more little theaters and art museums and financial support of universities without attempts to dictate their policies.

"If our newly rich have nothing better to do," Vance asks, "than to harass the few distinguished universities the South has produced, to buy radio time to try to turn back the clock, to prove they are economic Neanderthals by boring into the Republican party and trying to destroy it with racism, who needs them?"

H. L. Hunt Says

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF TYRANNY

The really successful totalitarian states are built by two kinds of men, theorists who justify unlimited power, and tyrants who use it.

The theorist has the first word. The tyrant has the last.

In almost every case, the man who actually exercises power is a coldly precise realist who knows exactly what he is doing and exactly what it really means. But often, in the early stages of building the total state, the theorists who justify power sincerely believe they can create a kind of utopia.

A fascinating and revealing chapter of history is the record of the theorists of the total state when their dreams finally met the man who would put them into practice. Another part of the same chapter is the story of the wild, undisciplined agitators who play their part in the tyrant's plans by breaking down the established order, only in the end to be crushed themselves beneath his iron heel.

So it was in the French Revolution, when Napoleon Bonaparte rose to power with the cry of "liberty, equality, fraternity", then kept himself in power easily against the late protest of the mob by a "whiff of grapeshot." So it was in the Bolshevik Revolution, when Lenin in power dismissed the last protests of his intellectuals in his famous pamphlet "Left-Wing Communism, an Infantile Disorder."

When the theorist of total power awakens from his dream of utopia to the ultimate reality that the point of the bayonet makes the decision, it is too late for liberty. HLH

A RICE PADDY IN VIET NAM -- AP -- It is said that in wartime there is no higher glory or greater reward than being commander of a company of troops.

He wouldn't trade it right now for any other job on earth.

He talked of it as he lay stretched out under a tent in a dried up rice paddy, loud with insect song.

The heat came down in an endless hammer of glare. Red and gold butterflies shimmered and skittered past and it was hard to think the enemy was only a couple of hills away.

"Once you put the average Marine out in the field his overall outlook on life generally improves. He has a sense of achievement. He feels he is doing what he ought to be doing."

"You don't join the Marines if you are looking for a soft, cushy life."

Pat has put in 13 years. After serving as a corporal in Korea, he quit to get a degree in industrial management from Bowling Green Ohio State University.

But he returned to the corps in 1958. Since then he has attended nine Marine, Army and Navy schools. He has won two medals for bravery, served in Cuba, made 100 parachute jumps and qualified as a demolition expert.

"I'm lucky in the men I have" he said. "They like the excitement of running around the countryside and shooting up the enemy.

Collins, who can put 20 shots a minute from his M14 rifle into a target 500 yards away, has both respect and disdain for the enemy.

"He knows the countryside, and is very deceptive and elusive," Pat said. "He is a master at concealment. He has a kind of circular foxhole in which the cover serves as his hat. He stands up, fires, then stoops and is hidden again.

"But they are lousy shots, real lousy. No guy could shoot that bad and stay in the Marines."

At 32, the captain is completely happy in a Spartan existence under which the meaning of his life is wrapped up by two words --dedication and duty.

"I don't sit around and dream of retiring to a chicken ranch" he said. "I think some people back home make themselves unhappy by being materialistic and selfish.

"I'm happy trying to do a job. It isn't really hard on us out here. I like it. The ones it is hard on are the wives."

"We are saving up to buy furniture," said Pat, "and this is a great place for thrift. There is nothing to spend it on in a rice paddy. But I guess when I get home Mary will want to buy out Buckingham Palace."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — War, no matter what the circumstances, is tragic business. However, the war in Viet Nam has become a lonely war and to some extent a personal war for one man.

This is not because the President began it. It began 18 years ago under the French, was picked up ten years ago by Eisenhower, and increased four years ago by Kennedy.

It's become personal today because the President feels it so keenly and directs it so carefully. Every morning at three he wakes up and calls the White House security room. Three in the morning is about the time the news is in from Viet Nam on the casualties and the hits after each bombing raid.

The President worries over these, broods over them, wants to know, no matter what the hour of the night, just what has happened. If a Cabinet member or sub-Cabinet member calls him at two or four in the morning, he doesn't complain. He has given instructions that they should call no matter what the hour.

One reason for this personal direction is that the President is worried over the possibility of enlarging the war. He knows how easy it is for bomber pilots to make a mistake, or how dangerous it can be to jettison their bombs on their way home.

On the usual wartime bombing raid, a mission will fly over a target, attempt to knock it out; but if the clouds are low or an enemy plane gives trouble, the bombers may drop their pay load indiscriminately on the way back, regardless of military targets.

—TARGETS OF CONCRETE—

Not, however, with the war in Viet Nam. Johnson has given strict orders that only the targets he picks out are to be hit — and these are bridges, ammunition dumps, railroad centers, and military installations.

"We're knocking out concrete, we're not hitting women and children," he has frequently told his aides. And he means it.

At first he griped that the Air Force wasn't able to hit a bridge carrying supplies down from North Viet Nam. Smarting Air Force commanders replied that if they were planning the raid themselves they could knock the bridges. So they sent as many as 22 planes on some raids, literally peppering a bridge with a holocaust of bombs.

Subsequent photos showed that the bridge was knocked out all right, and the Army ribbed the Air Force on using so many planes. But the President, who studies every aerial photograph, considered it important that no civilians were killed.

In addition to his care to avoid civilian casualties he is concerned over any bombing mission which might stray over the line into China or give the Communist Chinese the slightest provocation to enlarge the war.

This is why the war in and over Viet Nam has been a lonely war, a personal war directed by a man who goes to bed well after midnight, but wakes up automatically at 3 a.m. to check on the military targets he has personally pin-pointed.

Under the Constitution, he tells friends, he is charged with the conduct of war. But regardless of the Constitution, he knows that if there are failures, or if the war spreads, he will get the blame. So he is taking the responsibility.

—INSOLUBLE MESS—

When the President outlined his Baltimore peace proposals they were also personal, especially his plan for a giant series of dams on the Mekong River to benefit all the Indo-Chinese countries, including North Viet Nam.

Dams and reclamation projects are something very close to his heart, he having been the father of the Little Colorado Project in Texas when a young Congressman.

Johnson had hoped that this, coupled with his offer of unconditional peace talks, plus joint U.S.-U.S.S.R. aid, might induce the other side to sit down at the conference table. It didn't, for three reasons:

1. North Vietnamese have been winning. Our bombing raids have not stopped the supply of troops and supplies from going south or the guerrilla raids by the Viet Cong.

2. The Russians, who normally might have acted as intermediaries, were put on the spot by our bombing of the North. The Chinese have chided them with being too friendly to the United States in the past, and with forsaking their alleged former role as the champion of small nations. So it's difficult for them to side with the United States now.

3. The Chinese are delighted at the predicament of both Moscow and Washington. They don't want the Vietnamese war to end. The longer it lasts, the more the United States and Russia become at swords' points, and the more the smaller nations of Southeast Asia pull away from the United States into the Red Chinese camp.

In brief, the military advisers who sold the President on the strategy of bombing North Viet Nam failed to understand oriental politics. Though he inherited the Vietnamese problem, they sold him on enlarging it into a mess that could either lead to world war or is almost insoluble without serious loss of face.

—BEHIND THE SCENES—

The CIA is using a mysterious airline that calls itself Air America, to drop weapons and supplies to our guerrilla fighters in Communist-held areas of Laos and Viet Nam. The CIA is trying to give the Reds a taste of their own guerrilla medicine. . . Senate investigators have discovered that the Central Intelligence Agency not only watches suspicious mail, but actually opens the letters as part of its secret intelligence work. However, Senators will protect the CIA, will not reveal this in their probe of government eavesdropping.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Riesel Predicts No Steel Strike -- But Big New Unionizing Drives.

Pittsburgh: --When you hear the college youngsters say "I've come clean from Pittsburgh," they mean the old black smoke once belching from the mills has been cleaned into white sky drifts.

So to the newsmen who once covered the Iron City when it was the nation's labor capital, it's all a little strange until they run into the new leaders of the steel union and hear them talk of "organizing the unorganized."

It is as though an old movie newsreel were replaying film clips of massing pickets, stentorian speeches and vast unionizing campaigns.

The spirit of the old CIO is in the new leadership of the United Steelworkers Union --held impatiently in restraint until a contract is signed with the steel industry.

It will be signed peacefully. There will be no steel strike this summer.

There are only a few pennies difference between the demands of the new leadership of I. W. Abel, Joe Molony and Walter J. Burke on one side and the Big Ten steel companies on the other. Thus, if prosperity depends on a peaceful steel settlement, there will be prosperity.

But this does not mean that Iorwith Wilbur Abel will have the time to spend cultivating the tulips and chrysanthemums in his flower garden.

Shortly after the steel industry contracts are signed, Abel and his high command will unleash their new organizing campaigns. Being men of tradition, tempered by manual labor near the old furnaces, impatient with the silk glove "statesmanship" of the Dave McDonald administration which preceded them, they will hark back to their old CIO days.

Special organizing committees will be pin-pointed around the country. Trained organizers will roam across assigned territories in every part of the land.

Non - union plants will be besieged. Perhaps not with the ferocity of the days of sit-ins and mass marches on giant installations. These are not ferocious days. But the unionizing drives will come. There are still big non-union steel plants.

Perhaps the walls will not be physically scaled as in days of old--but efforts will be made to penetrate them far beyond the floors of the furnaces, rollers and ovens. This time, in addition to men of steel, the union of steelworkers will attempt to sign up the white collar people in the offices, the technicians, and others in the automated mills of today.

Drives beget drives. They spread like fever. Smaller unions which were stalled or have been shrinking for years are expected to troop to the steel union headquarters.

They will be supported and invited to merge. The tie that binds will be of metal. It will be in the militant tradition of other lands where all metal workers join in one big union.

There is, for example, the shipbuilding union. Alone, it has had little strength and has lived an almost unknown existence in Camden, N. J., while its president Johnny Grogan, has doubled as mayor of Hoboken in the Garden State.

But with the power of the steel union's big treasury and million members, the union will be reborn and spread into other fields now booming, such as sports and fishing craft.

And, despite the psychiatrists, the filial tie is never truly severed. It was from the miners of old, led by the now 85-year - old behemoth, John L. Lewis, that the steel union sprang.

There's still some coal dust in the veins of I. W. Abel. The United Mine Workers could use him and the union he has just headed. There will be talks and cooperation. And in those talks will be "auto's" Walter Reuther.

Together they represent some 2.5 million in America's basic industries. They will move. And if "Fourteen B"--the Right-to-Work law-- is repealed, they will venture south and southwest.

Perhaps, with the thunder rising out of the Far East, the public has paid little heed to the changing of the old guard in the steel union headquarters here.

If so, the public has overlooked the launching of a new era in its own backyard.

The Modern Christian

Is the Bible the supreme source of communication from God?

In the Old Testament God, step by step, through human institutions, human words, and human persons, revealed Himself.

The prophets, for example, were prompted by God and communicated to His people the message of salvation.

This verbalized expression is surpassed by the person of the prophet himself. What the prophet stood for, what he was, how he lived, was a living message of the spirit of God working in him. The prophet attempted to communicate through all his actions the power of God. A person, the prophet, was God's medium of communication to his people.

The coming of Christ moves man into an entirely new dimension of communication. Christ is the Person of Communication. He is Communication: He is the Word.

Technically, we refer to Christ's entry into the stream of humanity as the Incarnation.

This revelation to man from God the Father is God the Son. The Son reveals himself to us by his human words and human actions. The words and actions are a medium of communication for the understanding of the Person who is with us always.

This is not something we fashion ourselves. This is something we discover by going back to the Word of God as we find it in Scripture which is the record of the faith of the early Christian community.

The Christian message, the Christian revelation, is Christ. Later, we will have to discuss the multiple dimensions of Christ's Person. Suffice it here, that God communicates through the fully human; in particular, a God become man.

The St. Louis Cardinals broke out of their hitting slump Thursday night, but they didn't count on a one-man assault by the Los Angeles Dodgers' Ron Fairly.

Fairly, one of the best clutch-hitters in the major leagues, dumped reliever Barney Shultz' eight-inning offering onto the right field pavillion roof to drive in two runs and give the Dodgers an 11-10 victory.

It was the eighth time this season the Los Angeles first baseman-outfielder drive in the winning run for the Dodgers.

Fairly began his assault in the second inning with a run-scoring double. He then climaxed a four-run rally in the fourth with a run-producing single that tied the game, 7-7.

All-in-all, he scored twice on three hits that accounted for three runs in five times at bat.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, sent Sandy Koufax to the showers with five unearned runs in the second inning and two earned runs in the third and chalked up 14 hits for the night.

Their ten runs almost matched the 14 they had scored in the last nine games. Three of Thursday night's runs were homers — Ken Boyer's fifth, Bob Skinner's second and Julian Javier's first of the season.

Houston, which handed St. Louis three losses — two in extra innings — last week in the astrodome, will meet the Cardinals tonight at Busch Stadium. Bob Gibson will seek his ninth victory against two losses, facing the Astros' Dick Farrell 4-1.

The Athletics, who were idle Thursday, will send Roland Sheldon (0-1) against Boston's Early Wilson (3-4) in Kansas City tonight.

CONCENTRATED EFFORT —Billy Martindale, one of the bright new faces in golf, takes the scholarly approach to his putting game, and he's learning that this method pays off.

Scott City Defeats Potlatch Forrest In CML Action

Potlatch Forrest lost its first game of the year, as they met up with a tough crew from Scott City and were downed 7 to 5.

Potlatch who had started off the season with a double win over Afton's Khoury Leaguers, just couldn't stop Scott City's hitting attack, as they went down in defeat.

Spear started on the hill for Sikeston but was relieved in the third by Stallings. Brant went all the way for Scott City and picked up his first win of the season.

Potlatch was led in hitting by Terry James who had two hits in the contest. James banged out a triple in the first inning. He scored Sikeston's first run in that frame. Owens, Heath, McClain and Metz had one hit each for Potlatch. Potlatch had six hits in the contest.

Stallings was the losing pitcher for the Forresters, he was relieved by Payne in the sixth inning.

Potlatch Forrest next game is against Bloomfield, there, Monday, June 7. They will be going for their third win of the season.

Young Steve Spray Leads In Buick Open Tournament

GRAND BLANC, Mich. AP -- Young Steve Spray took a giant step toward a slice of the $100,000 Buick Open Gold Tournament jackpot by taking the first round lead Thursday.

Spray, 24, playing in his seventh tournament and yet to win a penny, fashioned a brilliant 32-36-68 over the Warwick Hills Golf and County Club course. The links yielded only 11 subpar rounds on opening day as 144 pros tussled with the par 72 course.

One stroke back was Julius Boros, the winner here in 1963. Six others, including Jack Nicklaus and Doug Sanders, were two strokes off the pace.

Among the score scrambling to survive the cut to the low 70-plus ties today was U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi. In one of his last major warmups in preparation of defense for his crown, he had a 76.

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were among 20 pros deadlocked at 73. Bruce Crampton, No. 2 money winner and the only three-time winner of this season's tour, had a 77.

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —Now the pro football expansion race is on.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced he has recommended the National Football League add two teams for a total of 16 by 1967.

Informed of the announcement by The Associated Press, Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League said the AFL might do it sooner, perhaps putting two new teams on the field by 1966.

Then they started ticking off potential expansion targets. Between the two of them they covered most of the major cities in the United States and Canada, including some in the rival league.

In a Thursday night news conference, Rozelle named 12 "major cities which have expressed an interest in an NFL franchise."

They are Montreal, Toronto, Boston, Miami, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Houston, Memphis, Phoenix, Seattle and Portland.

When it was pointed out that Boston and Houston already had teams in the rival AFL, Rozelle said:

"I have not given extensive thought to that. I have no feelings about those cities in particular."

But Foss had some particular feelings.

"There's plenty of room for both of us," said the commissioner of the five-year-old, eight-team league. "There are any number of cities that can support pro football and any number that can support two teams."

Then he ticked off his list: Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Atlanta, New Orleans, Miami, Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, Portland, Louisville, Memphis, Seattle, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia and Los Angeles all have teams in the 45-year-old NFL and Milwaukee supports the Green Bay Packers, some 60 miles away.

At present, only New York has a team in each league and a two-team trial in Dallas didn't work out, with the AFL team moving to Kansas City. Both leagues are now armed with millions of dollars in television money and are looking for new markets

FINDING THE WAY

We Must Remember

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.

WHAT SHALL PEOPLE REMEMBER?

No person can choose all of his experiences. Not even a hermit can do that. Yet we can choose how to live within those experiences.

We can choose our memories and we can use them. We remember the guilt, forgetting the forgiveness. We remember the sins, forgetting the grace that redeems. Memorial Day is for the right remembrance.

HOW SHALL PEOPLE REMEMBER?

The ceremonies are important. They remind us and keep the remembrance contemporary. Even a people at play can recall Valley Forge, Appomatox, Verdun, Dunkerque.

We are a poor people if we forget the struggles for freedom and allow dignity to be eroded. We have not found the use of memory if we shrink from our time in despair.

"If I forget Thee, let my right hand lose its cunning."

WHEN SHALL PEOPLE REMEMBER?

"Memory is the diary we carry about with us." The historian Toynbee said the only thing we learn from history is nothing. Remembrance is not just a sentimental pause until we go on heedlessly.

Real remembrance is daily growth. Remembrance is a cocoon that breaks open. It is the researcher recalling a thousand failures and giving us a new memory. It is the fighter for freedom recalling the struggles of another time as he works today. The finest recollection of the past is in the integrity of our present.

WHY SHALL PEOPLE REMEMBER?

It is too easy to live from moment to moment, drifting through life. A people remember because we live in today and not yesterday. This is the new century and the treasured old is become the tumultuous present.

"Man is challenged to participate in the sufferings of God at the hands of a godless world." That is a call to each of us. When we think of the cost, we remember the price of the freedom given to us.

"Surrounded then as we are by these ranks of witnesses, let us strip off everything that hinders us, as well as the sin that dogs our feet, and let us run the race that we have to run with patience, our eyes fixed upon Jesus, the Source and Goal of our faith."

Peter Snell Top Attraction In L.A. Tonight

LOS ANGELES AP -- Track fans will get their last look at sensational Peter Snell of New Zealand tonight as he heads a crack group of runners in the mile run in the annual Compton Invitational meet in Memorial Coliseum.

The action was shifted from nearby Compton because of poor facilities in its original setting.

Billed to compete against Snell, who says this is his last season of competition, are such other sub-four-minute milers as youthful Jim Ryun, the Wichita, Kan., high school star; and veterans Jim Grelle, Cary Weisinger, Bob Schul and Josef Odlozil of Czechoslovakia.

Snell will be aiming at his own world mark of 3:54.1 but, as in past appearances here, he cautioned that he generally runs to win, not necessarily lower a record.

Business Confidence High

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) —Business health continues apparently unshaken by disputes over monetary policies or government guidelines for the behavior of industry and labor unions.

Judged by the latest flow of statistics, business confidence seems little affected even by nervous twitches in the stock market over international trouble sports or comparisons of today's prosperity with the 1929 boom and bust.

Key industries report sales still strong, some records being set in production, and a steady flow of new orders that promise busy months ahead.

Autos and steel, the two segments where an early summer letdown has been most feared, have entered June at record, or near-record speed.

Steel output has climbed for two straight weeks. The latest weekly tonnage is 2,727,000, just 79,000 tons below the record poured in the week ended April 24. The drop from that record in the first three weeks of May appears to have been due as much to repair work at overstrained mills as to any easing of demand.

Most mills report orders on the books will keep them going near top speed through June and July. Any inclination of steel users to live off built-up inventories may have been postponed till after the strike deadline of Sept. 1, or until a wage pact settlement is reached.

Auto production has set a monthly record for six straight months. The spurt of sales and output in the opening months of the year at the time had been thought due largely to shortages caused by last fall's strikes.

But figures for May show that Americans are still buying cars at a great rate, setting a record for that month.

Assemblies in May rose to 837,168 cars, or 15 per cent higher than the previous record for May, set last year. The first five months of 1965 saw 4,259,628 cars produced, compared with 3,654,697 in the like period of 1964.

Auto industry confidence rides high. June assemblies are expected to rise to 902,000 cars, or 16 per cent more than a year earlier. This would make the second quarter output of around 2,600,000 cars higher even than the first quarter which many had forecast would be the high for 1965 model production.

The fast pace continues in many other industries.

New orders for all U.S. factories rose to a record in April of $41.2 billion, up a half-billion from the previous record set in March.

Business puts special emphasis on new orders because they indicate activity in the weeks and months ahead, as distinguished from production figures which show how business is doing now, or has been doing in past weeks.

Order backlogs on factory books have been pushed close to $59 billion by the upsurge in new orders.

Fertility & Sterility

THE INFERTILITY PROBLEM

But what about the childless couples — the 10 per cent of marriages (the figure varies little from country to country) in which the husband cannot fertilize or the wife cannot conceive?

At one time the wife was invariably considered responsible for barren marriages. Physicians know now, though, that husbands are the source of the difficulty in almost half of the cases.

Unfortunately, some men feel that this suggestion is a reflection on their "masculinity." This is an enduring belief but a myth — there is no connection between sexual virility and biological fertility. As this recognition grows, more husbands are willing to join with their wives in inferility examinations.

In the management of fertility, the physician first rules out or treats such overt problems as infections or poor state of general health. He does not exclude the possibility of malnutrition inasmuch as there is a correlation between prolonged poor diet and malfunction of the reproductive apparatus.

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTOR

Some physicians also look for psychogenic causes — a vexing problem lacking clear answers. There are schools which doubt that emotional tension can play a causative role in infertility. Some studies, for example, fail to support the belief that a significant number of childless women conceive soon after adopting a child. On the other hand, there are infertile women who conceive shortly after making an appointment for examination. And one pathologist has shown that medical students produce far fewer normal sperm cells during major examination periods than at other times. For many doctors, emotions remain in a gray area.

QUANTITY AND QUALITY

In the male, physiological infertility can take several forms and is usually a matter of degree. Either too few sperm cells are formed in the seminiferous tubules of the testicular apparatus (oligospermia) or the sperm that exist lack motility — the ability to drive through the cervix and into the Fallopian tubes. (Occasionally a tubal blockage prevents the transmission of sperm, but patency can usually be gained by surgery.)

Sperm counts can fall within a wide range and still be considered normal. Counts above 60,000,000 per milliliter of semen are generally effective, but some specimens contain as many as 300,000,000 spermatozoa.

As for motility, the minimum standard established by the American Society for the Study of Sterility calls for 60 to 70 per cent of spermatozoa to be in this state a little more than two hours after the specimen has been ejaculated.

Considerable success has been achieved in the correction of male infertility since the discovery that a disproportionate number of spermatozoa are contained in one section of the ejaculate. With the "split-ejaculate" technique, the first part of a husband's sperm is segregated and given to the wife as a concentrate via artificial insemination.

Under study now, too, is a method of freezing several split-ejaculate specimens to build a larger concentrate. And in still another experimental effort, semen is centrifuged to concentrate the sperm. But here a method must be found to avoid injury to spermatozoa caused by the centrifuging itself.

ROLE OF ANDROGEN

Male infertility has also been attacked through the hormonal route. Although androgen, the male hormone, probably does not stimulate spermatogenesis directly, it is believed that normal sperm production cannot occur with inadequate androgenic function. In some cases, androgen flow has been stimulated by the administration of a substance which contains luteinizing hormone. (Oddly or not, the substance is chorionic gonadotropin, obtained from the urine of pregnant women.)

And finally, the problem of immunity is now receiving much attention. Couples with otherwise normal reproductive capacities can become victims of a biologic paradox. In a sense, the wife becomes "vaccinated" against pregnancy. This happens through an immunologic reaction of the kind that stimulates the body to produce antibodies against invading pathogens. Since spermatozoa are "foreign invaders," some become coated with antibodies as they enter the female reproductive tract and are rendered nonfertilizable. To overcome this problem, physicians have been recommending a period of sexual abstinence, coitus interruptus, or use of a condom — anything to keep the sperm out of the female tract for a while to prevent the buildup of immunity. In some couples the gambit has been successful. After two to six months, no sperm antibodies were being formed in the wives and some pregnancies followed.

Cookout 'Tools' Needed For SummerBarbecue

This summer the tantalizing aromas from backyard cookouts will float through the air and titillate appetites as never before, as more and more families discover the barbecue way of cooking.

When Americans first adopted the barbecue as a favorite form of summer cookery, the equipment used resembled implements used by the cave man. They were often improvised.

Today all this is changed and many a barbecue enthusiast is as particular about the "tools" for his culinary pursuits as the dedicated hunter, fisherman or golfer.

With the barbecue, the man of the house usually comes into his own as the "chef" and like all good craftsmen, wants good tools.

To get ready for your summer cookouts, take inventory and make a list of items needed for a well-equipped barbecue, suggests Anne Winfield, home adviser for F. W. Woolworth Co.

Here is a list of items needed: a good-sized charcoal grill and charcoal starters, a five-piece barbecue tool set, chef's apron, mitt and hat, grill cover, patio lights, a hamburger press, skewers, turners and a set of stackable patio tables.

This might seem to involve a sizable expenditure, but actually all of this equipment can be purchased for less than $40, the Woolworth home adviser says.

With the "tools" for cooking provided for the head of the family, the wife can supply the sauces, condiments, napkins and paper plates to complete the ensemble.

If so, a "cookout" can be held at a moment's notice.

(In answer to our request for an autobiography)

By Bil Keane
(The Family Circus)

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 5, 1922. Until I was ten I drew nothing but criticism. Didn't always spell my first name BIL. My parents named me Bill, but when I started cartooning on the walls, they knocked the "L" out of me.

Graduated from Northeast Catholic High School in Philly where I was art editor of the monthly school magazine. I ain't never went to no college.

Taught myself to draw by imitating my favorite cartoonists in the magazines and newspapers. Three year Army hitch in Southwest Pacific Area. Wound up as a staff sergeant on STARS AND STRIPES IN TOKYO doing a daily cartoon. "AT EASE WITH THE JAPANESE."

Worked as staff cartoonist on the Philadelphia Bulletin from 1946 to 1959 and created a Sunday comic feature, "SILLY PHILLY", which is still read weekly by "nearly everybody" in Philadelphia.

In 1948, remembered my wartime sweetheart in Australia, Thelma Carne, and flew down under where we started our own population explosion: Gayle, Neal, Glen, Chris and Jeff. (Present ages left to right: 11, 9, 7, 4 and 3). Thel passes on everything that comes off my drawing board. She is the most kissable editor I have met. (And a lot prettier than Charlie Blanton).

Started "CHANNEL CHUCKLES" for you fellers in 1954. As of July 7, 1961, I will have drawn 4,001 cartoons on the subject of television without burning out a picture tube.

I use no gag writers and create all my situations myself. I draw entirely with a crow quill pen and work very fast. I rough out six gags at a time, pencil in the six and then ink them as the mail truck is bounding across the desert toward my studio.

"THE FAMILY CIRCUS" came to town in February, 1960. All the gags for this feature are right out of my own home. The characters in the feature are counterparts of the various characters found in abundance lying in disorder in the Keane home. I work with one eye on the drawing board, my other eye on the calendar, and my OTHER eye peering at the back lawn and the antics of the five little Keanes. I just draw what I see.

I do occasional cartoons for the major magazines, though, before syndication, I was selling regularly to the top markets. The Saturday Evening Post prints my "PUN-ABRIDGED DICTIONARY" from time to time as a feature on the Postscripts page.

I like puns. To me they are the number one form of humor. (And there is nothing lower than number one.) In my upcoming Sunday "FAMILY CIRCUS" page, I intend giving a good play to this brand of humor which scores highly with the younger set (and the older set, and those in between).

Lived for years (ten to be exact) in a small mortgaged home in Roslyn, Pennsylvania (just outside of Philadelphia). We packed up our toy boxes and moved to Scottsdale, Arizona, in 1959 where we now live in a LARGE mortgaged home. We like it here among the cactus, sunbeams and land speculators.

I love to draw cartoons and consider myself one of the luckier citizens to be paid for doing what I like to do best.

Lightest Mexico

By John Abney

Mexico City -- A scientific pamphlet published here says the loud booms you keep hearing are no sonic booms but the population boom echoing around our planet at the rate of 100,000 new persons a day.

At the present time, this pamphlet says, nobody knows just how many inhabitants we have because so many people have put their minds on things other than work that it is a matter of speculation.

Mexico has one of the fastest growing populations in the world and to illustrate a point, the writer of this article says that a pair of pedigreed fish put into a pond will start a very curious process of multiplication. They double their numbers each year.

The article says that in the simple case of 2x2x2 etc. for 50 years, the pond winds up with more than one quintillion fish. And it says if the fish were sparrows that weighed one ounce each, you would have 35 billion tons of sparrows.

About the only thing I can see that this proves is you would need a barn 100 miles long and a mile and a half wide to house 35 billion tons of sparrows. It would need very strong rafters and would have a pretty untidy floor.

Where is the population boom taking us? the writer asks.

I cannot answer for the fish and sparrow problem. But I can give the gentlemen some information on the boom around the Abney household.

The latest little explosion is a five-months-old contribution to professional football. At this fragile age, Mr. Jim prefers to make his own decisions and his thinking is unswayed by fingerpointing threats of violence.

It is not my fault. He takes after his mother, a flightly lady who will plant a right cross on my chops if she ever reads this.

The rest of the family spoils Mr. Jim and they sabotage my efforts to bring him up properly.

It is a well known fact that five-months-old people like to have their way in everything and this is what I wish to avoid.

"Guess I will exercise my lungs," he mutters to himself. And Mr. Jim has very powerful lungs. "Things are a little quiet so maybe we should put some life into the party. YE-E-E-O-OW!"

The rest of the clan pays no attention to this shouting. If an adult stands around bellowing in such a fashion he is arrested for disturbing the peace and the law makes him pay a fine.

The same thing should apply to small persons because it is not good to let them get away with screeching just because they happen to like screeching.

So on these occasions I override the objections of the family and put a firm fist on the table so they understand punishment WILL BE dealt out and the head of the family tolerates no monkey business.

Since Mr. Jim has no money to pay a fine I grasp him firmly and take him to a torture device known as the Rocking Chair. And I rock him into a state of unconsciousness.

Let them protest that it is too severe for such a small party. One thing he is going to learn at an early age is that he cannot lie there shouting just because he feels like it.

I don't know about the rest of the planet's new inhabitants but nobody is going to spoil my child.

100 To Enroll In Head Start

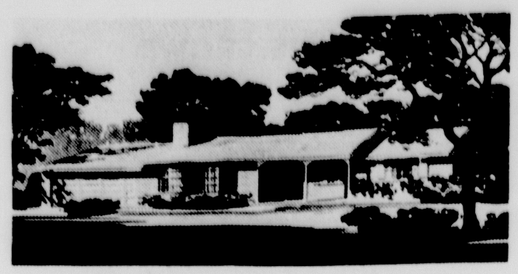

PORTAGEVILLE -- Operation "Head Start," designed to help children of disadvantage families to be better prepared to meet classroom situations when school re-convenes in September, will get underway here beginning June 21, and lasting for eight weeks according to an announcement made this week by Tom Park, superintendent of Portageville schools.

In this program, children, who will attend school for the first time next year, will enroll in classes to be held from 8 a.m. until noon. In these classes the children will be taught the proper use of scissors, crayons, restroom facilities, eating utensils, other school equipment, and etiquette.

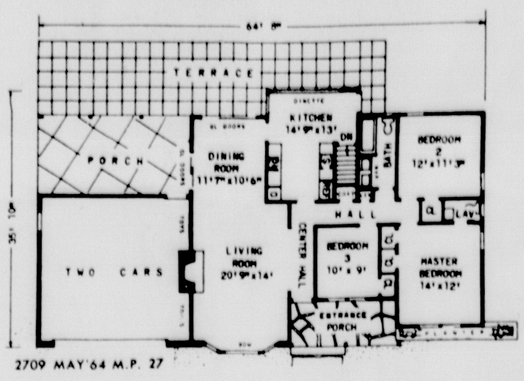

Superintendent Park said that approximately 150 children are expected to enroll in the first grade in September. Approximately 100 will enroll in Head Start.

Seven teachers, one director, and one other paid leader will make up the instructional and supervisory staff for the program. Park said that no teacher will teach more than 15 pupils. He said that helpers will be needed. He intimated that this force might be made up of mothers of the children.

Five Narrow Bridges In Bootheel Will Go

JEFFERSON CITY — Five narrow bridges all in a row — long considered nerve-wracking by motorists in the Bootheel area — are on their way to being replaced as a result of a construction contract awarded April 16 by the State Highway Commission, the Missouri Highways News reports.

The 20-foot wide structures are strung out in hopscotch fashion on Route 84 east of Kennett in Dunklin County. They span a series of five drainage ditches between Route U and the Dunklin-Pemiscot County line.

Replacement of the bridges and their accompanying 20-foot roadways has a two - fold purpose: (1) to coordinate highway construction with Corps of Engineers drainage ditch work which would affect stream flow at two of the bridges, and (2) as a safety measure, because the narrow bridges and road have been the scene of numerous traffic accidents.

The Commission awarded a contract for building the five new bridges, plus 1.1 mile of 24-foot portland cement concrete pavement, to Penzel Construction Co., Inc., of Jackson, Mo., on a low bid of $802,442. Bids were opened April 2. The Corps of Engineers will pay $68,973 of the cost.

The project will be built entirely on new location a short distance south of the present roadway. The old route and bridges will serve traffic during the time of construction but the old structures will be removed when the new highway is completed.

The new bridges will be 28 feet wide and their length will vary from 171 feet to 324 feet. Four of them will be continuous I-beam structures and one a continuous plate girder bridge.

Work on the project was to begin in May. The contract allows the contractor 150 working days to complete the job so it may not be finished during this construction season.

The 1.1-mile section being replaced has been the scene of numerous traffic mishaps. Department records show that three deaths, 46 injuries and 72 accidents have occurred in this short stretch since January 1, 1955.

Built in the days of the Model T, the old bridges were constructed as part of a Route 84 contract awarded in 1922. That project extended about seven miles across the width of Dunklin County from the St. Francis River east to the Dunklin-Pemiscot county line, with the exception of a section in Kennett.

Started in 1922, the project was completed in 1926. The pavement put in at that time was portland cement concrete, nine feet wide. The pavement was widened to 19 feet in 1932 and in 1958 it was widened again to 20 feet and surfaced with asphaltic concrete.

An indication of the rise over the years in highway design standards and construction costs is that the entire seven miles of Route 84 in Dunklin County, when built more than 40 years ago, cost only $362,078.

Hearnes Names Group

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Gov. Warren Hearnes has named a blue-ribbon medical and lay group to study ways to improve the state's important public health program, under the direction of the Missouri Division of Health.

The state's chief executive named a select committee, headed by Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, dean of the Missouri University Medical School, composed of medical representatives, professional health workers and two legislator.

Governor Hearnes asked the committee to determine whether proper coordination exists among the state's various health agencies and whether there is economy and efficiency in those activities.

He also asked for recommendations as to what can be done, with or without legislation, to improve Missouri's efforts in the public health field.

One Southeast Missourian, Rep. Tom Baker, D-Stoddard County, was named by the Governor to the study committee. Rep. Baker is charman of the House Public Health and Safety Committee.

Other members, in addition to Dean Wilson and Rep Baker, include Dr. Hector Benoit, Kansas City, chairman of the executive council, Missouri Medical Assn.; Dr. Howard Gross of Kirksville, president-elect of the Missouri Assn. of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons; Dr. Howard Eller, Director of Health, St. Louis County; Dr. John Whitney, regional director, U.S. Public Health Service, Kansas City;

Dr. Henry M. Parrish, chairman of the Department of Community Health and Medical Practice, University of Missouri; Dr. Edward Hassinger, chairman, Missouri Health Assn.; and Sen. William J. Cason of Clinton, chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee.

The commission will study the present operations of the Division of Health, headed until Tuesday by Dr. Henry Hardwicke, who submitted his resignation effective June 1. The chief executive named Dr. L. M. Garner, director of local health services in the Division of Health, to serve as Acting Director, on a temporary basis.

A replacement for Dr. Hardwicke is expected to be named in a few weeks.

President Urges Less Silver Be Put in Coins

Provide for new dimes and quarters with no silver content. They have about 90 per cent silver now. The coins would have a copper core with an outside layer of a mixture of copper and nickel that would make them acceptable in vending machines rigged to reject slugs with no silver content.

Allow 40 per cent silver content, instead of 90, in a new half dollar.

Make no change in the old silver dollar - but continue the ban on coining the cartwheel.

The new coins will not come out until next year. Meantime, Johnson said that 300 million troy ounces-more than 10,000 tons-of silver will go into coinage this year. This is far more than the total free world output of silver expected for this year.

Oh God, help us to be masters of ourselves that we may be servants of others.

Leisure Is Boredom

In The Globe-Democrat

LBJ the pious has given us the blueprint of what he calls "The Great Society" in which everybody will be educated, everybody working for good wages, every elderly person assured of comfort and car in his advancing years, poverty abolished. He provides an enchanting glimpse of paradise, with everybody satisfied because he will have no worries.

No worries except those related to paying for his Utopian concept, but that is no concern of his as of now. He will balance the budget by bookkeeping legerdemain and sum it up as Progress toward the better life for all.

Of course, we are at war in South Vietnam which costs us a mere $1,500,000 a day and we have commitments around the world by way of wasteful foreign aid and we have a national debt that costs multi-billions annually in interest alone. Forget it! We are rich and can afford anything, which is the basic premise of the New Deal in extended form.

To implement all this he must shake up the executive structure and may add at least a new Cabinet member — a Department for Urban Affairs which might meet a logical need. But he did not mention a Cabinet post that could be useful — a Department of Leisure. It would deal with the problems of those who for various reasons have time on their hands and don't know what to do with it.

For many years the ambition of most American men was to live a life of ease without financial worries after retirement. Women shared in this quest for happiness. Now the problem seems to be that all of us have too much time for leisure and as a result our lives are more complicated.

We witness the development of automation which decreases the work load for most, coupled with the chance of earlier than expected retirement to make room for the next fellow.

Organized labor demands a 35-hour work week. But still fewer hours are demanded and will probably be attained.

As our population expands there are more and more elderly persons, our senior citizens. Many are still able to work at their old jobs but because they are not wanted they must seek occupation elsewhere.

This may be financially rewarding or it may take the form of civic or church endeavor. But this is not always obtainable, perhaps for reasons of health.

For the women, of course, there is more leisure because modern inventions have lessened the work load. In other days the woman did the washing for the family while stooped over a tub and washboard. Now she throws the soiled clothes in a machine which washes and then dries them and can iron them.

Food preparation has been simplified what with packaged frozen articles from soup to dessert. Everything these days must be "instant" and speedy from automobiles to a glass of iced tea.

How to utilize leisure time is a real problem. So serious that books have been written about it and costly studies made — one under way will cost $5,000,000. The Editorial Research Reports raises the question of "whether the American worker really wants more time off than he already has; when given a choice many seem to prefer paid work to free times."

A short time after the AFL-CIO plunked for the 35-hour week, its community service activities section held a conference to discuss the "shorter work week and the constructive use of free time." As one speaker put it: "The real question is not are we going to work less hours, but what are we going to do with our free time." The consensus was that art and culture may be great, "but you can't cram this stuff down people's throats."

Within the past few years numerous Leisure communities have sprung up from coast coast. They purport to offer comfortable and sometimes elegant housing for retired persons, with health and recreation programs that are tempting to the old folks. Some are co-operative.

The majority are honest and give the buyers what they want and need. I know several persons who have invested in these places in California and are well satisfied.

However, some are projects which do not even attempt to provide what they advertise.

The obvious advice is to investigate thoroughly before signing up. There is even the factor involving your neighbors. Do you wish to spend your last years in the company of old folks exclusively, or do you desire a bit of younger frivolity in your life? Items to be considered.

In this roundabout fashion I come to my own Leisure problem. I have been in retirement from newspaper work for more than four years and although the adjustment from active duty has been a bit difficult, it has not been unpleasant.

I can read as much as I like and I can do some writing, and I try to keep myself in circulation among my friends. I did not crawl into a shell and watch the passing scene with a bilious eye, completely shut off from the outside world.

But — and this is a big one — shortly before last Christmas my doctor gave me a general check-up and made a few discoveries. His prescription was to place me on the inactive list, confined to quarters. My previous exercise habits were sketchy but even these were restricted to walking in my apartment.

I could read as much as I liked, but otherwise I was to lead a completely sedentary life. (Happily the ban has been lifted and I now can do pretty much as I wish, within reasonable bounds.)

During this period of inactivity I had a sample of what complete leisure means. I could read but who cares to sit in an easy chair all his waking hours with book or magazine in hand? Occasional trips to the typewriter helped but were not the answer to boredom.

I had television and radio but the irritations of loud and frequent commercials, blasting bands, shouting announcers introducing the masters of ceremonies and their "wonderful" talent, plus the utterly ridiculous clamor of audience participation — all served to cancel out many programs as satisfying entertainment.

I had believed before that television and radio offered monotonous mediocrity; now I am convinced. This does not apply to all programs.

I can't comment on Westerns because I never look at them, but I was impressed with the vapid results on several shows in which the panelists tried oh! so hard to be oh! so clever. Maybe forced cleverness is an occupational disease.

Some weather reporters still call it "percipitation" with "northerly winds prevailing," and we are still told what to do about our "perspiration" problems.

If we are not a people with the smoothest skin, the cleanest clothes, the best groomed hair, the best explored sinuses, and the fewest tooth cavities, it isn't the fault of the advertisers who plug us ad nauseum.

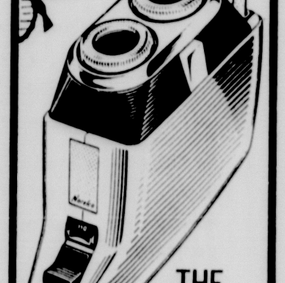

Why doesn't someone write a singable song anymore? Today's ballads are atrocious recitals of unrequited love, made worse by the dramatic efforts of the singers, men and women, who put "feeling" into their work.

The American Academy of Political and Social Science proposes that the government should take the prime responsibility for the wise use of leisure and that "earnest leisurists should exert pressure on every American state legislature to establish a Department of Leisure for local communities."

The primary goal would be to lead people to practice "the fine art of living." The evils of specialization in sport are deplored and the emphasis should be on activities which evoke pride of doing, togetherness, human understanding, creativeness and a development of the mind and spirit.

My personal leisure experience was a health problem. I shudder to think what complete boredom it would be if it were permanent, which I am assured it is not. I'm afraid any Department of Leisure would find me a tough customer.

When I Was A Boy

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

Benjamin Franklin Blanton, a newspaper publisher, retired in August 1915 after 42 years with the Monroe County Appeal. In 1919 and 1920, when he was over 80 years old, he began a series of recollections called "When I Was A Boy". His first by-line was "Pappy" Blanton. Later the quotes were taken from the title and the by-line was changed to "B. F. Blanton."

The recollections of the "old Man" (as he also called himself), were recused for students at the Mark Twain Shrine from the files of the "Appeal" because Benjamin F. Blanton was a contemporary of Mark Twain and was raised, like Mark Twain, in the northeast region of Missouri. His recollections help one interested in Mark Twain to understand that boyhood which was so extremely important to Mark Twain. The years of Mark Twain's childhood and adolescence interested Mark Twain more than any other years of his life, and what is now competently believed to be his best work is sourced in his keen memories and images of those Florida and Hannibal years when he was a boy. Benjamin F. Blanton, like Mark Twain, was raised on a farm and in a town on a great river, the Missouri, and learned the printing trade as a boy.

However, the printed memories of Benjamin F. Blanton have their main value as personal, state and local history. They were immediately so valued and were widely reprinted at the time they were first published in the "Appeal." They form an original document worth sharing again and again.

Later on his son "Jack" Blanton, when he too was over 80, published a series with the same title. His son's series became deservedly popular and articles from it are being reprinted today. The son's series was written in a different style and with a better mastery of the English language, but they do not reach back to that idyllic, pre - industrial age which fascinated Mark Twain and "Pappy" Blanton. The "Old Man's" articles are of an older time and have a value of their own.

When I Was A Boy

When I was a boy in the country the wives and daughters of farmers spun the yarn, wove the clothes, cut and made the clothes for the entire family. Now farmers' wives raise poultry and ride in automobiles.

When I was a boy there was no threshing machinery in the country and wheat was tramped out by horses and cleaned up with a wheat fan turned by hand. Now we have machines that cuts the bundles, threshes the wheat and stacks the straw.

When I was a boy wheat and all small grain was cut with a cradle and then bound by hand, hard work for men. Now a twelve year old boy or girl sets on a binder, cuts and binds the grain and bunches the bundles ready to put in a shock.

When I was a boy a man plowed his corn with a single horse hitched to a shovel plow and went three times in every row of corn. Now with modern cultivators a man plows two rows every time he crosses the field and does it better.

When I was a boy a ten acre crop of wheat was considered a big crop. Now a thousand acre crop of wheat causes very little talk.

When I was a boy all the cooking was done in an open fire place in pots, kettles and skillets. Now we have ranges, gasoline and oil stoves and electric cookers, even fireless cookers.

When I was a boy people ate corn bread every day in the week except Sunday. Now there is more wheat bread eaten than corn bread, to say nothing of cake, pie and pudding.

When I was a boy there was no ready made clothes for men or women in our county. There were many tailors in the towns but in the country all clothing was made at home.

When I was a boy there was not a sewing machine in the country. Now every family owns one, many families have two, some run by an electric motor.

When I was a boy there was not money enough to hire a girl to ride a horse astride, but times have changed and the modern girl is not so modest as her mother was.

When I was a boy the telephone had not been dreamed of. Now there are millions in use and they have become a necessity.

When I was a boy a young man when calling on his girl in the evening was expected to stay for supper and leave about 8 o'clock. Now it is quite different as we all know.

When I was a boy a young man, and many older ones, had a pair of boots that he only wore on Sunday. A pair of boots would last several years for Sunday.

When I was a boy I never heard of paying for digging a grave. The neighbors considered it a duty to dig the grave and would have been insulted if any pay had been offered them.

When I was a boy I never heard of a store coffin. If a person died a neighboring carpenter made a nice walnut coffin for a few dollars. Now coffins are made by a coffin trust and you pay a pretty penny when you use one but you have to have it. It costs too much to die and be buried in the modern way.

When I was a boy ministers generally preached from an hour and a half to two hours and while scoring other denominations, generally preach Christ and Him Crucified. Now our modern preacher talks about 30 minutes on the war or some scientific subject, but toward the end of the sermon says something about the love of Christ for humanity. They are not so much to blame. The people won't go if he holds on more than a half hour and the preacher gives them what they want.

When I was a boy we never heard of a trained nurse. If you got sick the neighbors took care of you, set up with the corpse and buried you, all for nothing. Now if you get sick it will cost you $5 a day for a nurse and $150 to $200 to be planted.

When I was a boy there was no free schools. A teacher would go through the neighborhood getting parents to subscribe so much for a three month school and when that term was out would do so again. School houses were all built of logs with rough puncheon floors and benches. Now there is not a log school house in Central Missouri, but nice modern buildings equipped with every convenience and children love to attend instead of being made to go as of yore.

When I was a boy ministers believed they had a Divine Call to preach the gospel. Now many of them feel called to preach where the salary is greatest. I can hardly blame them.

When I was a boy there were no telegraph instruments, telephones, no steam cars, no autos, no sewing machines, no riding plows, no cultivators and all work was done by human power and endurance.

When I was a boy no one believed a woman had sense enough to teach school or else she would be unable to control the "big boys". Now 90 per cent of the teachers are women and have proven to be more capable of teaching children than were the men teachers.

When I was a boy all steam boats, railroad engines and mills burned wood, not knowing coal would be much better. Now wood has been discarded and coal and electricity have taken the day.

When I was a boy it was a very rare thing to find a family in the country who took a newspaper. I can now remember but one such family. Now almost every family in the country takes but one to a dozen newspapers and periodicals. The result is that people of today are much more intelligent than when I was a boy.

When I was a boy there were no steel pens. All the writing was done with quill pens which the teachers made for the kids. Now no one ever sees a quill pen and most of the writing is done on a typewriter, especially in all county, state and government offices.

When I was a boy there were no coal oil lamps. People in the country used tallow candles and made them at home. Now the present generation never saw a tallow candle but use brilliant oil lamps and electric lights.

When I was a boy there was darn little of any conveniences, but there were plenty of good warm hearted neighbors ready, day or night, to give a helping hand to a neighbor in need, which is worth more than gold or the fast life we are now living.

A girl's mother had opposed her daughter's marriage to a certain young man, but when the girl went ahead anyway, the mother openly blamed the son-in-law for dragging her poor, young, innocent daughter to the altar, and missed no opportunity to make snide remarks about the marriage. Then the day came when the young couple informed her that they were expecting a baby.

"Oh dear!" she wailed, looking at the young man with indignation. "First you get married, and now this!"

"Well," smiled her son-in-law, "just consider yourself lucky that it wasn't the other way around!"

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Every now and then you print a letter proving that behind every successful man is a plucky, game little woman. I'm a man who has succeeded in the asphalt jungle and you are right.

My wife must be credited with a tremendous contribution to my success because she drove me out of the house with her nagging, criticizing, and complaining. The office was infinitely more quiet and peaceful--and I enjoyed my work, so I became a 15-hour-a-day man, six or seven days a week. When a man puts in that kind of time, over a period of years, he's GOT to amount to something.

I hope you will print this letter so my wife can see it. I want her to get the credit she deserves. -- CUSTOM MADE SHIRTS

Dear Custom Made: It's generous of you to want to give your wife all the credit. But I think you deserve some credit, too--not only for your smashing success in business, but also for your miserable failure at home.

Some men who don't want to go home don't want to stay at work either, so they go scouting for trouble and they find it. Presumably you avoided this trap. So what do you want from me--a medal?

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if you think our 12-year-old boy is eating too much. Last night Louis had three helpings of chicken, three helpings of mashed potatoes, two pieces of apple pie and two glasses of milk. He would have taken a third glass of milk if I had said O. K. My husband does not eat nearly so much as this boy and neither does our 14-year-old son.

Yesterday Louis came home from a scout hike and told me he ate three hamburgers and drank three bottles of pop. He boasted "Even the scout master didn't eat that much." Does this sound like a problem? --A MOTHER

Dear Mother: Yes. It sounds like a boy who can't get attention through acceptable channels. Some kids would eat a dishrag dipped in vinegar to capture an audience.

When you make a point that Louis eats more than his father and older brother it suggests that he is overeating to show off. His braggadocio about outeating the scoutmaster is additional evidence.

Take the boy to a physician and let him decide if Louis should be on a diet. And stop talking about how much he eats.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 20-year-old girl who lives at home and attends junior college. Last week I was dialing a friend and ot a wrong number. The party on the line was pleasant, cultured and interesting. This may sound crazy but I couldn't bring myself to hang off so we talked. He said he is 24, single and gainfully employed. We are of the same religious faith although I am a regular and he is not. We have similar interests in art, books and records.

He asked for my name and number so he could call me. I refused but agreed to call HIM again. We've had five conversations and I am so fascinated with his voice that I can't wait until we speak again. To be honest, Ann, I'm dying to meet the fellow. Yes or no?--ANNABELLA

Dear Annabella: Since you are both of the same religious faith, an ideal place to meet is in church.

If he declines the invitation disconnect him permanently. And congratulations for being smart enough NOT to give him your name and number.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

TRIUMPH OF FAITH

Theoretically we know that "He doeth all things well," and that "All things work together for good to them that love God," but it is a triumph of faith which brings great glory to God when, in the time of nature's sorrow, the whole soul of the believer rejoicingly accepts the Lord's dealings.

IT'S UP TO YOU

Howard F. Kershner, L.H.D.

A NEW COMMUNIST FRONT

I recently received through the mail a warning from J. Edgar Hoover telling of the newest Communist Party front organization designed to attract young Americans. It is called the W. E. B. DuBois Clubs of America.

This organization is in response to the Communist Party's decision of a year ago "that additional measures should be taken to recruit young citizens."

Mr. Hoover warns that "the true face of communism has another mask to wear -- a new disguise calculated to dupe unwary youth."

Mr. Hoover's warning regarding this organization starts out with the words: "Wanted: Young People to Help Bury America. Openings for Pallbearers of Truth and Gravediggers of Democracy. No Prior Experience Necessary."

Mr. Hoover's communication continues:

"A record number of young people are now entering college classrooms to engage in one of man's most noble pursuits: the search for truth through the acquisition of knowledge. In America, this endeavor is as honored as the freedoms which make it possible. It is an undeniable fact that under communism these freedoms do not exist. Communism stipulates the 'truths' its scholars must embrace and spreads its venomous lies and distortions through any available medium."

The above paragraph is followed by the statement: "This academic year will undoubtedly see intensive Communist Party efforts to erect its newest facade on the Nation's campuses to draw young blood for the vampire which is international communism."

In a communication "to all law enforcement officials" Mr. Hoover says:

"As an example of communist deception in action, the DuBois Clubs chose as their official insignia a half white, half black circle encompassing a white hand and a black hand under a dove. Thus the symbols of unity, brotherhood, and peace wave as a banner for an ideology that countenances discord, hate, and violence.

"This organization and its communist parent would have us believe that communism has only one hand — the extended open hand. But a look over their shoulder sees the other hand clasping the Berlin Wall and squeezing freedom's breath from enslaved millions. It is this duplicity that is difficult for young Americans to comprehend. If our young citizens turn an objective, analytical searchlight on this ideology and its organizational arms, they will understand communism for what it is -- a materialistic, godless dogna dedicated to world domination.

"By spreading its poison through young veins, gangrenous communism is attempting to render the future America a quadrangle amputee -- a nation without freedom of speech, press, assembly, and religion. The youth of this Nation, armed with the scalpel of truth, can and must cut this disease from the body of America."

Outdoor Water For Outdoor Convenience

Funny how things go in circles. Years ago, folks had water in their yards because that's where the pump was. Later, you weren't up-to-date unless you had indoor plumbing, so water left the yard and went into the house. Now it's back outside again (don't worry, the indoor plumbing stays).

Today, says the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, families are discovering that outdoor water facilities really make sense. The patio sink is a good example--equipped with hot and cold running water, it gives kitchen convenience right in the yard.

Cooking utensils are washed and rinsed on the spot--a glass of water is an arm's reach away -- sticky fingers are washed in a jiffy--dishes are rinsed before going inside for washing. For cleaning the patio area, too, the sink is a big help. Hot soapy water is there where and when you need it to wash down the table, chairs and other lawn furniture as well as for scrubbing the patio floor.

Another important must for outdoor living is an adequate number of outdoor faucets. Anyone who has struggled with several lengths of hose to sprinkle distant lawn and garden areas can appreciate the value of having a faucet on each side of the house. The Bureau recommends that at least one side also be equipped with a hot water outlet, as well. Hot water near the drive, for instance, is handy for washing the car and other items such as window screens. It's also good for tempering the water in wading pools. For any outdoor hot water needs, in fact, a hot water faucet puts an end to trudging back and forth with pails.

A drinking fountain is another outdoor water convenience. Thirsty youngsters at play can get a drink without tracking through the house. A "child-level" fountain is handy for the children and saves a lot of work for mothers.

All in all, today's outdoor people need outdoor water. Your qualified plumbing contractor can give you further details concerning modern facilities to make your yard more enjoyable this summer.

The Rev. Harry Fifield tells it on himself. His sermon featured a most involved interpretation of the writings of an Old Testament prophet, a sermon he struggled through and finished with great satisfaction. Then he asked the congregation to request a preferred hymn.

A woman raised her hand and suggested: "Some Day He Will Make It Plain to Me."

"All men are created equal."
"... of the people, by the people, for the people ..."
"We have nothing to fear—but fear itself."
"Let us pray ..."

In the simple words of prayer, in the ritual of worship, in the wise counsel of the man who leads each congregation there is some private, personal meaning for each person who listens. On these words you can build your Faith—a Faith as strong as you will work to make it.

Faith can offer new strength to everyone—especially to you alone.

PRAYER: O God, help us each day to live up to the best we know! Grant us wisdom. Give us grace and courage to be at our noblest each moment of this day that we may lead others to Christ. In the Master's name. Amen.

REA Meeting To Elect Officers

Four board members will be up for re-election: E. A. Story, Charleston; Charles Grojean, Chaffee, Jim Spradling, Kewanee; and L. B. Mayer, Dexter.

The business meeting will begin at 1 p.m. Final plans are to have Assistant Administrator Richard H. Wood from Washington, D. C. as the main speaker to address the meeting at 1:30. During the business meeting, nominating committee reports will be given, a treasurer's report, manager's report, and other matters will come up followed by the election of directors.

Before noon, to reward the people who come early, the Slim Rhodes Show will perform and a quiz program or audience participation contest will be conducted, with 20 prizes for persons who answer the questions correctly. Prizes will be silver dollars.

At 4 p.m. right after the stage show acts of entertainment, the big prizes will be given away as listed on the regular notice mailed out to the members. These prizes are worth the trip to Sikeston alone, as they range from value of $250 down, Manager Stephenson said.

Out of 20 prizes, 20 families will take home a valuable prize plus some 10 or 15 other smaller items for that many families, making a total of 30 to 35 families winning prizes plus the folks who answer the questions right in the quiz program.

According to Stephenson, this has been a very successful year from his reports on revenue and return on the money borrowed from the government. Dividends are larger this year, larger checks will be mailed out to each member next year as a share of the profits.

This year checks are now being mailed out. If the member reading this hasn't received his capital credit dividend check on his $5.00 stock in the Co-operative, then his name is either in the last letters past "H" in the alphabet, or the check was returned to the Co-operative marked "address unknown" for the 1959 payment.

Arrangements have been made for the state association caravan show to come to Sikeston and set up the week prior to June 25, to begin the season here. This 4 act stage show will travel to some 23 other R.E.A.'s this summer in Missouri to help put on annual meetings. The night of June 24 there will be a rehearsal of the actors who will assemble here for their first show together. All of the town folks are invited and all rural families who want to see the show twice are invited. Come and bring the kids the night before at 7:30 p.m. , then see it again during the day of June 25.

The co-op manager stated that Richard Wood is scheduled to speak at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Duties in Washington make Richard Wood a busy man and the Cooperatives are fortunate to get him as speaker. Special effort is needed to get out a crowd to hear him. Men are especially invited to come.

Three stands will be set up on the grounds to serve sandwiches and soft drinks and ice cream. With the many fine downtown restaurants able to serve the crowd, members are invited to come early and get registered. The featured speaker in the afternoon is well - worth the effort expended to come.

A great amount of pride is being experienced by older members of the board to realize the 28th year in operation, and recall back over the years of progress. Many problems have been thrashed out and many hurdles had to be crossed over in 28 years to make the business a solid asset to the five counties. Electricity on all the farms of a 50-mile square area are more valuable as the years go by, and as the cooperative gets to be a big business. Pride in control of the lines gives a boost to moral and rightly should make every member proud of the service up and down all the roads the same as the board is proud in having a part in making this dream come true.

The 30th anniversary was celebrated last winter for the R.E.A. in general. This year will be our 28th for the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Electric Cooperative, which will celebrate next year as its 29th Anniversary. It was organized in 1937. The first lines were surveyed in 1938 and constructed the latter part of that year into 1939.

The first loan from the government was $157,000 to build 176 miles of line with 402 connected consumers. Progress was slow before the war. All people wanted electricity. Miles and miles of line were signed up but could not be built as rapidly as the demand required. Today the demand is satisfied. The Co-op no longer needs to build very many new lines. The contractor left nine years ago and the Co-op maintenance crews have been handling all short lines that need to be built according to the president.

Over the years additional money was borrowed each year as the Co-op grew in size for expansion. The last eight years money has been needed for heavying up transformers, services and change out of bad poles. The Co-op is self-supporting and the money is being paid back when due to the government, on schedule, management said. An all out effort is being made to improve the service some each year.

The Cooperative has only seven more years to go to pay off some of the original loans on the "A" Section which were 35 year notes with interest at the rate of 2%. Those interest and principal payments on all of the various notes, dated when needed, when money was drawn from the government, have been paid promptly when due. Some have more principal paid than others, depending upon the age of the note. Generally speaking, the Co-op is in good shape physically, plant has been kept up, bad poles are being changed out each year, heavy lines are being put in and heavy transformers to take care of the larger loads that are being put in. Money is being paid back to the members in form of capital credits as set up in the formula recommended by R.E.A. as a method of distribution of profits to comply with the federal income tax exemption status.

How To Cope With Clammy Closets

Don't put in an emergency call for your plumbing contractor if you see moisture all over your plumbing tanks and pipes this summer. In most cases they haven't sprung a leak, they're just doing something pretty normal for this time of the year -- sweating.

The formation of water beads on tanks and pipes in hot, humid weather is due to the condensation of water vapor in the air. Moisture will form on any container holding liquid cooler than the surrounding atmosphere.

But sweating tanks and pipes aren't something you have to put up with, reports the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau. For instance, there are several ways to prevent moisture dripping from the outside of a water closet (toilet) tank onto the floor:

1. A special type of water closet that features a virtual tank within a tank. Water is stored in the inner tank, and with air space between the two, the outer tank remains at room temperature. At room temperatures, of course, no condensation will form.
2. A mixing valve to warm the water entering the tank to approximate room temperature. The valve mixes water from hot and cold supply piping.
3. Forced air circulation in the bathroom or powder room by means of a ventilating fan. This speeds evaporation, often removing condensation as it forms.
4. Installation of a drip tray under the tank.

Steps 1 and 2 are the best solutions, of course, since they prevent condensation from happening in the first place.

For sweating pipes in basements and utility rooms, there are special types of insulating coverings to prevent dripping. For further information, contact a qualified plumbing contractor.

USDA Salutes Dairy Month

Endorsing the 29th observance of June as Dairy Month, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman this week reminded the Nation's consumers that milk and dairy products have been considered one of mankind's basic foods since earliest times.

The Secretary said, "Nothing takes the place of milk, especially in the diets of growing children. That is why USDA is continually striving to broaden the school lunch and milk programs of the Consumer and Marketing Service."

Secretary Freeman further pointed out that good nutrition in other age groups seldom is possible without adequate amounts of milk and dairy products. Teen-agers grow so swiftly they paramountly need the quickly - available energy and nutrients found in milk.

For older citizens, milk is an economical source of calcium and a good source of protein, he said.

"USDA carries on research and education programs to improve our knowledge of nutrition and to spend this knowledge as widely as possible. Observances such as June as Dairy Month contribute to these objectives by spotlighting nutritious foods that are readily available and reasonably priced," the Secretary pointed out.

THIS OLD HOUSE

ALMA HOLLY

COMMERCE: What is there about an old house that is so mysterious and challenging? Why can't we walk by with an "I don't care" nonchalance and let the past have its prologue? Why? . . . Well, because most of us have an innate sense of curiosity, and a searching nature that wants to delve into the past and unravel what is finished to see how the pattern was woven.

There is far more than decaying architecture involved in a run down old house. Especially so if it is an old red brick structure bearing a Hawthorn flavor with its seven gables. The house, situated on a selected vantage point atop a high knoll overlooking the Mississippi river, had an ever passing parade at its front door.

Many times at night, excursion boats passed by with gayly emblazoned lights, the sound of the calliope and the tinkle of gay laughter emenating from the ballroom.

Within the house, there are still signs in evidence of its past grandeur. Walking through the rooms, one feels like keeping silent to listen for voices to come from out of the past. Dust forms a grey mask over the furniture but beneath the somber covering, beautiful woods and pink quarried marble protrude. The entrance way, through a heavy four inch - hand crafted door, opens into a large room. A curved stairway rises sturdily to the upper rooms. At midsection it turns and the walls have deep niches where large pieces of statuary once stood. Leaded glass windows on either side of the doorway let in rays of light.

The entrance, really a room in itself, was furnished with black leather chairs skillfully upholstered and tufted in satin smooth leather. A fine old table held, among other useful and decorative objects, a turret-type silver urn with goblets for family use, set in molded positions on either side of the covered pitcher.

The South sitting room, had centered on one wall, an intricately etched black marble fireplace. This room had an alcove beneath the tower of the building. From its three sides one is afforded a view out over the Mississippi.

Across the hallway is another parlor similar to the first. It has the same black marble fireplace with its fine grey-green scroll etching. At one wall an old roll-topped secretary stood. Here the family business was executed and many letters were written with a feather quill pin - dipped into the silver encrusted inkwell. A carved molding in each room separated the ceiling from the walls with artistic accent.

From the kitchen came potato biscuits, candies and ginger cakes to send to a young girl who was away in a finishing school.

On warm afternoons, there were often a bevy of the towns' women gathered on the front porch of the old house. Here the gracious hostess served her friends her popular blackberry shrub. Now and then the lively conversation would be interrupted by the passing of a colorful steamboat on the rivers' waters.

The first owner of the house was a Mr. Wathen. It was built by him in 1859. During the Civil War, Union soldiers occupied the dwelling. Then the house was purchased by Mr. W. B. "Uncle Billy" Anderson who used it for his Summer home. When he came down the Mississippi to look after his business and farming interests, he brought his horses and carriage. Mrs. Matthews, a sister of Mr. Anderson, purchased the house in 1925.

Now after many years of being closed and boarded up, the house has been sold and the fine old furniture has gone on to the auction block. It will, perhaps, become scattered to the four winds. An era has passed, but because the house has come into the hands of one who appreciates its past dignity and beauty, it will again lift its head in pride and live anew through restoration. What a pity the furnishings could not stay intact! But, then who knows -- they may slowly find their way back.

Lesson Of Three Georges

JENKIN LLOYD JONES in The Commercial Appeal

Eastbound near Miles City, Mont. - I have just come down from the dome car where I have been watching the blue water boiling beneath the heaving ice of the Yellowstone River and the winter sunshine glinting off the deep snow.

A few minutes ago, just east of Forsyth, the beautiful train roared over a small creek. My map tells me it is the Rosebud. And it puts me in mind of the Civil War and three Union generals -- all named George -- from whom, perhaps, a lesson can be drawn.

George Armstrong Custer had a passion for glory. Only 22 at the outbreak of the war he hurried from West Point to Virginia and began a hell-for-leather career as a cavalry officer. He chafed at restraint. He exceeded orders. But gradually the word got around. Custer was a thunderbolt.

At Gettysburg, Custer made the Michigan cavalry famous. They promoted him to brevet brigadier general at 24. Sheridan gave him his head in the Wilderness and Shenandoah campaigns. At Cedar Creek and Five Forks he was superb.

GALLED BY THE GARRISON HE BUTCHERED INDIANS

Peace found a frustrated Custer busted back to lieutenant colonel in the regular army. Garrison life galled him. So it was with joy that he received orders to round up the Cheyennes in Western Oklahoma in 1868. The Battle of the Washita was an outrage. The Seventh Cavalry butchered old men and rode down squealing squaws.

Eight years of inaction followed. Then came a new big chance. Ordered out to scout hostile Sioux in Montana he rode joyously up the Tongue on June 23, 1876, crossed to the valley of the Rosebud, and the next day on a ridge overlooking the Little Big Horn he took on Sitting Bull and about 5,000 Indians. Custer won glory at last, as he and his 264 men died.

McCLELLAN WAS BRILLIANT BUT TOO HESITANT

The second George -- George Brinton McClellan - made none of Custer's mistakes. He was a brilliant organizer. He took raw hordes of skylarking volunteers and sullen draftees and drilled them into an army.

He went ever prepared for disaster. His troops idolized him. He could do everything --except win battles.

McClellan always accepted the gloomiest rumor. He was so afraid of defeat that he never committed his full force. At Antietam, even while holding in his hand Lee's whole battle plan, he hesitated. Outnumbering Lee by two-to-one he left two corps in reserve, and the battle was close to a draw. Lincoln finally fired him.

The third George was George Henry Thomas, a Southern West Pointer who stayed with the Union Army. His promotions were slow because Northern politicians distrusted his loyalty. But he had to rise. He was just about the best general the Union had.

He could be as methodical as McClellan, as fast as Custer. He saved the center at Stone's River and was "the Rock of Chickamauga." At Nashville Thomas waited for the ice-covered countryside to clear while Grant, from Virginia, bombarded him with demands for immediate action and even ordered his replacement. But when "Old Pap" moved at last the army of Hood vanished in two days. Nashville has been described as the best planned and executed battle of the war.

SAME KIND OF STRUGGLE IS IN EVERY MAN

Now, it might be said that every man lives a struggle in which the Custer and the McClellan inside him jaw and argue from the moment he stands in his playpen to the hour of his death. Man is torn between the desire to do and the fear of doing. He wants glory. He fears defeat.

You'll never get rich putting your money out at four per cent in a savings account. You won't lose your money either. You'll never become president of the firm by being mousy and agreeable and trying not to attract attention. But you won't get caught up in power struggles and the chances of being fired are lessened.

Your defensive George McClellan nature will preserve much of your resources in the face of disaster. But only by your aggressive George Custer nature will you ever win at anything more than penny ante.

The ideal man is the Thomas man. He is the man who will spare no effort to get ready and will not move until he is. Then he can roar back from his own Nashvilles, shouting, as George Thomas did:

"Dammit to hell, I told you we could lick 'em!"

Integrity Of The Dollar

By WALTER E. SPAHR, Ph.D.
Executive Vice President
Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy.

Enactment by Congress of the bill, H. R. 3818, February 18, removing the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, constitutes a dangerous disservice to the people of this nation and may result in increased foreign demands for our gold. Neither this amendment nor others to reduce or remove reserve requirements of Federal Reserve banks has a valid defense.

The removal of the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits eliminated the reserve against our most potent currency.

Federal Reserve notes, against which reserve requirements are to be maintained at least for the present, constitute a small element in the reserves of member banks. But the deposits in Federal Reserve banks are largely reserves of member banks which reserves support the credit expansion of member banks.

The enacted bill opens the way to a practically unlimited expansion of deposit currency in this country and to a radical depreciation of the value of our dollar. Monetization of the national debt can take place without any effective limitation -- a procedure used by Germany up to the collapse in the value of her mark in 1923.

Proposals offered to elminate the gold certificate reserve requirements against both note and deposit liabilities of the federal Reserve banks have not thus far been converted into law. Such a procedure would open the way to unrestrained monetization of the national debt and to the reduction of the notes and deposits of Federal Reserve banks to the status of fiat currency, the weakest and most dangerous type of money known to man.

Still other proposals were made recently which point toward a weakening in our currency structure and which would open the way to a still greater monetization of the national debt and a further depreciation in the purchasing power of our dollar.

The testimony of Secretary of the Treasury, who advocated enactment of the proposal to remove the gold certificate requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, reveals that it is, in essence, a case of attempting to convert black into white or evil into virtue.

In no respect was the fundamental question faced as to whether the relatively low ratio of our monetary gold stock to nongold money and deposits could properly be expected to correct itself if our currency were given the quality of integrity.

Instead, his recommendation was in behlaf of a further expansion of money and deposits to foster "healthy economic growth" and "to accommodate the monetary and credit needs of a strong and growing economy with stable prices," with endorsement of a proposal designed to weaken our currency structure still further.

Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System likewise supported the bill to remove the reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank notes.

The statement was made by Secretary of the Treasury that "certainly, it is essential that this country . . . continue to hold a large gold stock, and our policies are directed toward that end." The fact is that our national government's policies, especially since February, 1958, have not been directed to that end. Nor were his recommendations supporting a proposal to weaken our currency structure still further.

The Secretary characterized our gold certificate requirements for our Federal Reserve banks as "essentially arbitrary and outmoded." That contention is a common theme of advocates of a cheaper currency, especially advocates of fiat money.

"The current gold cover requirement," said the Secretary, "is an outgrowth of a much earlier period in our monetary history, and can be fully understood only in the context of circumstances that have long since vanished."

Andrew Dickson White threw some light on the age of that variety of argument in his Fiat Money Inflation In France (D. Appleton-Century Co. edition, New York, 1933) as he described the French experience with fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century. After describing the sad consequences flowing from France's use of fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century, White issued the following well-grounded warning:

"Every other attempt of the same kind in human history, under whatever circumstances, has reached similar results in kind if not in degree."

Advocating further currency expansion by means of removing the reserve requirement against deposits in Federal Reserve banks is in nature as old and as fallacious as the major contentions which commonly accompany the arguments for fiat money.

Under our present arrangements, our nongold money and credit lack the quality of integrity domestically.

The people of this country have lost a valuable property right in not being able to obtain and to hold gold as they may desire.

Because they have lost the right to demand redemption of so-called "promises to pay," they cannot place any effective restraints on the Treasury or banks in the issuance of such "promises." A consequence of fundamental importance is that our people have lost all effective control over the government's use of the public purse.

The gold certificate reserve requirement placed a needed and proper restriction on the issuance of Federal Reserve notes and deposits. Without such a requirement, paper money and bank deposits become fiat currency in nature.

The great need of our people in the field of money today is that our currency be given the quality of integrity. And this means that all varieties of our dollars should be freely exchangeable at the parity rate of $35 per fine ounce of gold to accommodate the needs and desires of all holders of dollars. What is declared to be a standard dollar should be usuable by our people.

The legal requirements for redemption of non-gold and non-silver money, as distinguished from freedom or exchangeability, should be in correct form to enforce the responsibility of the agencies which issue non-gold an nonsilver money and credit -- for example, requirements that there be 100 per cent gold against gold certificates, 100 per cent silver against silver certificates, a fractional percentage of gold or silver against U. S. notes, a fractional percentage of gold and silver against Federal Reserve notes and deposits.

Should our money and deposits be given the quality of integrity, a great proportion of the $12,-698,000,000 of gold held under earmark for foreign account at end of December, 1964, could be expected to be returned to our monetary gold stock and there should be a considerable exportation of gold to this country.

In Thailand, Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver, Jr., attended a boxing match between a Siamese and a Peace Corpsman. "It ended in a draw," Shriver reported. "For a while I was afraid it was going to end in a Thai."

You may think so. But you could be mistaken. The truth is that in many schools, vigorous physical education activities that develop strength, flexibility, agility and endurance are not scheduled as an integral part of the daily program.

And this is one reason why the physical fitness of our children has declined. In fact, recent pilot studies showed that almost half of the youngsters tested proved to be physically under par. Isn't this reason enough for more emphasis on an organized program of physical education?

Fortunately, a program has been developed that will get our children back in shape. It is a minimum program, and it can be carried out in any school—at very little cost and with a minimum of time.

All it takes is 15 minutes of vigorous activity every day during the physical education period. In schools that have adopted such a daily program, boys and girls have shown a remarkable improvement in their physical status.

Certainly, you want your child to develop his body as well as his mind. So, why not find out about the present physical education program in your child's school?

Take it up at your next PTA meeting. Insist that a full 15 minutes every day is spent in vigorous, body-building activities as part of a scheduled program.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1944, the first units of the U. S. 5th and British 8th armies entered Rome. Most of the troops were held on the outskirts until the next day.

In 1888, New York State established electrocution as the death penalty.

In 1896, Henry Ford made the first successful trial run in his automobile.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced that his relations with Soviet Premier Josef Stalin were excellent.

Ten years ago - East German leader Walter Ulbricht reported that a conference at Warsaw, Poland, had set up a committee to coordinate policies of Communist nations from the Elbe River to the Pacific.

Five years ago - The State Department accused Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro of conducting an intensive official campaign of slander against the United States.

Island Welcomes Mrs. Johnson

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, St. Thomas, V. I. AP--This tropic island gave Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson a warm welcome on her first visit here and the governor added "the keys to our hearts."

In Emancipation Gardens where slaves were freed more than a centruy ago, a crowd of about 7,000 turned out to cheer the First Lady as she noted "the impressive way equality was translated into reality in these islands."

TIPS ON FOOD WASTE DISPOSERS

Before having your plumbing contractor install a food waste disposer in your sink, have him clean out the drain. Once the drain is clear of past accumulations, you need worry no more. The natural scouring action of ground wastes by the disposer will keep the drain clean.

CARNIVAL

By Dick Turner

"Boy! You'd never think to look at him that his allowance was smaller than mine!"

SIDE GLANCES

By Gill Fox

which McDivitt's 8-year-old son Mike plays, defeated the Falcons, 3-2. McDivitt was asleep at the time the word was relayed.

The plan had been disrupted during the first three orbits when McDivitt made a futile attempt to catch and rendezvous with another satellite — the burned-out third stage of the Titan 2 rocket that boosted them into orbit.

Hodge said that throughout the night, the Gemini 4 was allowed to drift on its orbital path without any expenditure of fuel.

Hodge said two orbit-changing maneuvers would be dropped from the flight and there would be some curtailment of scientific experiments that require spacecraft maneuvering.

He said McDivitt and White were getting used to sleeping in space after initial "tossing and turning" periods. Each slept well on their second four-hour slumber period, he reported.

Folks used to worry because they couldn't take it with them. With today's tax situation their only worry is whether it will last as long as they do.

Flyers Spirits High

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White whirled into the second day of their marathon space mission today, their spirits high and their flight plan back on schedule after some hectic early hours during which White strolled in space.

The Mission Control Center said everything appeared favorable for the Gemini 4 spacecraft to complete its full 97-hour, 50-minute mission.

If there are no hitches, America's longest manned space flight will end at 12:06 p.m. Monday with a parachute splashdown in the Atlantic Ocean 400 miles southwest of Bermuda.

During a pass over the Houston Control Center on the 14th orbit today, White told capsule communicator Virgil Grissom a few more details about his 20-minute excursion into space during orbit No. 3 Thursday.

White described as "vivid blue" the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. He said he clearly saw Houston and Galveston Bay as he floated on the end of a golden lifeline more than 100 miles above the earth.

He said he even saw Clear Lake, about 3 miles long and 1½ miles wide, near the Houston homes of both astronauts.

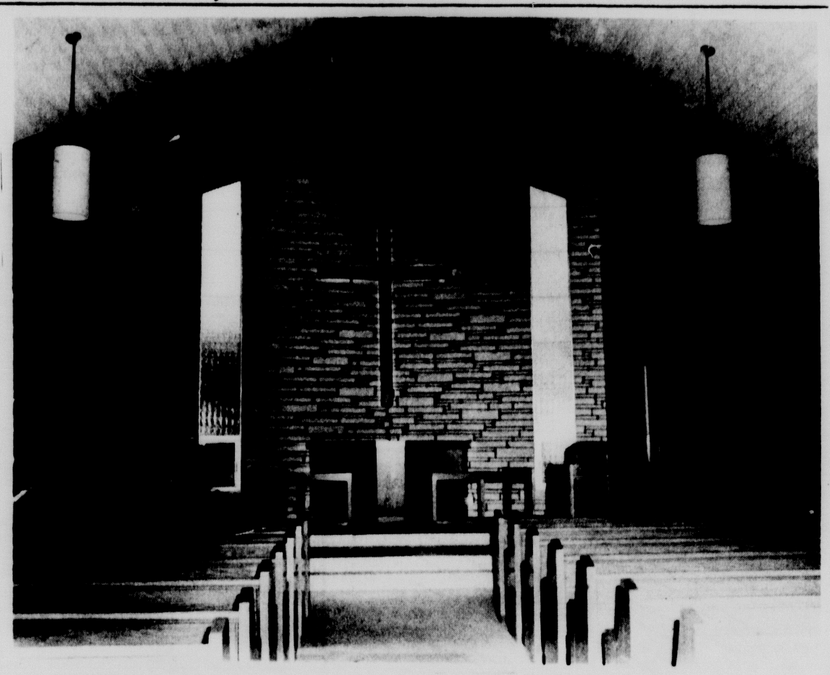

White said the jet-gun maneuvering unit he used made it much easier to move about outside the capsule. When he wasn't using it, he said, he had difficulty getting around.

White also said he had walked on the equipment section of the Gemini 4 during his excursion.

"It looked like I was right on top of it," he said, "It's kinda hard to get traction."

Then Grissom passed on some news from home. He reported that the Hawks, a Pee-Wee League baseball team for

Lilbourn Scouts Will Camp Out

LILBOURN -- Scouts from Lilbourn's troop 50 with New Madrid Scouts will board a bus at the high school at 12:45 p.m., June 20 on their way for a week's excursion at Camp Lewellan near Silva.

The Scouts will be accompanied by Owen J. Taul, high school principal and Scoutmaster of Troop 50.

Taul reports that since 1941 Lilbourn Scouts have been experiencing the week's encampment each year at Lewellan. He said that this year some of the boys who will make the trip are following in their father's footsteps.

The scoutmaster emphasized that while the camp-out is designed for the boys' pleasure, the week is primarily one of Scout work with each youngster given an opportunity to advance in rank, and leadership. Merit badges may be earned in many areas some of which would be difficult to earn at home.

Each year, the Order of the Arrow call-out ceremony highlights the week's encampment. Scouts who are called-out to be intiated and to receive this honor exemplify the highest qualities of scouting. Taul reports that two Scouts from Lilbourn's troop will be called out.

Church Will Be Dedicated

MATTHEWS -- The new Christ Lutheran church building will be dedicated Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with the Rev. Harold Belsheim, pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, as speaker.

The building has a seating capacity of 150, Sunday School rooms and a large meeting room with an adjoining kitchen. The building has floor space of 4,000 square feet, and is paneled in dark and light mahogany color. It has a small balcony for a choir with a seating capacity of 50. The outside walls are of buff brick with stained glass windows.

The building is air-conditioned, has a sound system and a new organ. Construction began Aug. 1, and was completed on June 1. Bernie Sims is the contractor, and Buchmueller and Whitworth and Associates the architects.

The flooring is of a new type tiling. The material is laid in a clear liquid form. After drying plastics chips are applied to the surface and the floor is polished.

The first church was organized in a quonset hut in 1948, under the leadership of W. A. Gemeinhardt and others, and has been served by the Concordia Lutheran Church pastor in Sikeston for 17 years. Pastors included Rev. Earl Weis, 1948-54; Rev. Eugene Lauterbach, 1954-60, and the Rev. Mr.

Mother Will See Two Academy Graduations

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- Weather permitting, Mrs. Raymond W. Vogel Jr. will see two of her sons graduate next Wednesday in separate ceremonies at the military and naval academies.

"Everybody kept saying, 'no, no, no, it can't be done'," Mrs. Vogel, of Arlington, Va., says. "But I don't believe anything is impossible."

So after five months of determined effort, she has arranged for Timothy J. Vogel to receive his diploma in an early morning ceremony at West Point, N. Y. This will give her time to fly to Annapolis for the 11 a.m. exercises where her youngest son, Frederick J. Vogel, will be graduated.

Also making the trip will be Rear Adm. and Mrs. Frederick James Brush, also of Arlington, who have sons graduating from both service academies. Brush is assistant chief of naval operations for logistics.

He is assigned to the Pentagon, where Mrs. Vogel works in the Office of Naval Intelligence.

At least one other couple, Mr. and Mrs. H. Reed Laughlin of Port Huron, Mich., solved the same problem by having each parent attend one ceremony. Cadet Frederick L. Laughlin will be commissioned an Army lieutenant. Midshipman Gary R. Laughlin will become a Navy ensign.

Mrs. Vogel's husband was a naval commander killed in action in the Korean War.

Unable to persuade either to change the time, she came up with the idea of a special ceremony at one school. As a result, Cadet Vogel and Cadet William J. Brush will be awarded diplomas early Wednesday morning at West Point.

Beatle Haircut On Way Out

NEW YORK AP -- A note for cringing parents and graying school principals: it looks as though the phenomenon known as the Beatle haircut may be on its way out.

An Associated Press survey showed today that long, stringy hair is going the way of all fads and, in this case, is winding up on barber shop or home bathroom floors.

The reasons are as numerous as the number of heads that once wore long hair. A teenager in Phoenix, Ariz., said it's just too hot.

"And there are too many singing groups like the Beatles now," he said. "It's no novelty."

An inspection of schoolboy styles around Dallas, Tex., showed the new long-hairs never had an influence there, even with the scores of boys who play in Beatle-type combos.

"The long-hair style is very much on the decline since the Beatles have quieted down and are staying away from this country," said Bill Evans, vice principal at Westport High School in Kansas City. He attributes the about-face to physical education instructors who insist athletes be shorn.

In Florida, there's a basketball team captain, Mike Chase, who must agree. Last December, Miami-Dade Junior College Coach Bill Alheim benched Chase for looking like a refugee from a mop shop, and Miami-Dade lost its next game without Chase who had been averaging 24 points per contest.

However, the survey showed that in some Florida areas the long-hair fad still persists. Another shaggy top region is Southern California where surfers and entertainers go for the style. There, something new has been added: bleached long hair.

Must Win On Ground

WASHINGTON AP -- Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey says air strikes alone won't do the job and the war in Viet Nam will have to be won on the ground by South Vietnamese forces.

Humphrey said in an Associated Press interview he believes that South Vietnamese fighting units -- given sufficient time--can subdue their Communist opponents.

He said he thinks the Viet Cong will call it quits once the Communists become convinced the United States is determined to stay to the end in South Viet Nam.

Humphrey said that while a year or two ago he had deep concern over U. S. involvement in the area he now strongly supports the kind of action President Johnson has taken there.

"I'm still concerned, but I know what we're doing is what we have to do," he said.

Horse Show Set for June 12

This year's show is sanctioned by the Mo-Ark Horse Show and Rodeo circuit. Judges will be selected from a group approved by this organization.

3-Vehicle Pileup Near City

In a car-truck collision at the junction of Highway 61 and Route H, eight miles south of Sikeston, during a rainstorm last night at 9:20 p.m., an unidentified man was burned to death, and Miss Mary Jo Myers, 17, route two Matthews, was fatally hurt. Miss Myers died today at 8 a.m. in the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Carroll Lee Rinehart, 42, Belleville, Ill., was driving south on Highway 61, at the Matthews-East Prairie highway junction, in an International tractor - trailer, when a 1951 Chevrolet, driven by Miss Myers pulled out on Highway 61 from Route H, into the path of the large cattle truck.

At the same time a 1965 Ford pickup, presumed to have been traveling north and driven by an unidentified man, with an Indiana truck license, was struck broadside by the International truck. This caused the pickup truck to catch fire and be destroyed. The driver of the pickup was trapped in his cab and burned to death.

Rinehart was not injured.

The driver of the International truck told the state patrol he did not see the small truck, as the truck lights were knocked out when it struck the Myers car and jack-knifed, the cab ending up in the northbound lane and the trailer in the southbound lane.

Traffic was blocked until midnight, and rerouted from the Noxall road through Matthews.

The body of the Indiana man was taken to the Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid, awaiting identification, according to Coroner Leo Hedgepeth, of New Madrid county. An effort was being made to identify him through Indiana plates on the vehicle.

Miss Myers was born March 4, 1948, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Myers, route two, Matthews. She was a student at Matthews high school, and a member of the Nazarene Church.

Surviving besides her parents are three sisters, Mrs. Spatsie Payne, Peoria, Ill., Misses Patsie and Terry Myers and two brothers, James R. Myers, Jr., and Tulley John Myers.

Second Crash At Scene

A second highway accident occurred last night at 9:55 p.m. a half mile from junction of Highway 80 and 61, the scene of an earlier tragedy.

Melvin Cobb, Benton Harbor, Mich., was driving south on Highway 61, and slowed down for traffic passing the first wreckage, when his car was struck by a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Euell Lovell, 29, Blytheville, Ark.

Injured was Ellia Lovell, 23, a passenger in the second car, who was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital and later released.

Plumbers Go Out On Strike

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 318, have gone on strike in a dispute over wages. Their two - year contract expired Tuesday.

Most of the Cape Girardeau contractors are on strike, as well as several shops in Farmington and Ste. Genevieve. In Sikeston only one firm has employes belonging to the union.

The dispute is over basic wage differences, according to a Cape Girardeau member, who said the plumbers had asked $1.15 per hour in wage increases over a three-year period, with the contractors first offer being a 65 cents per hour increase. A compromise was offered by the contractors raising it to 90 cents per hour spread over three years.

The union wants a 25-cent increase the first year, 40 cents the second and 50 cents the third year. The contractors have offered 20 cents, 30 cents and 40 cents per hour over three years. The wage sale for union plumbers is now $4.26 per hour.

There was no immediate effect on large construction work in Cape Girardeau, including school and hospital annex building.

Fighting Heavy In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- Heavy ground fighting continued across South Viet Nam today and government casualties for today and Thursday rose to at least 239 killed, missing or wounded.

Vietnamese troops were caught in two more Communist ambushes, one a followup action by the Reds to an earlier ambush near Lao Thien, about 150 miles northeast of Saigon.

Casualties in the first ambush of a six-vehicle convoy Thursday totaled 15 government troops killed, 15 wounded and 15 missing. Two armored cars were destroyed, two trucks damaged and two machine guns lost. Communist losses were not known.

A relief force sent in a few hours later was hit about seven miles northeast of the first action. The government losses in this engagement were nine killed and 14 wounded. Planes and artillery fire finally routed the guerrillas.

Another ambush occurred near Kontum, about 285 miles northeast of Saigon, where a six-truck convoy was on a food pickup mission. A military spokesman said first reports listed 12 Vietnamese killed and nine missing. There were no reports of Communist losses.

President Tells Russian People U.S. Wants Peace

CHICAGO (AP) — President Johnson has told the people of the Soviet Union he wants them to withdraw support of aggression and subversion and join the United States in a common search for peace.

Appearing Thursday night before several thousand Cook County Democrats who paid $100 a plate to hear him deliver his first on-the-record speech to a political audience since the November election, Johnson said at the outset: "I do not believe this is an appropriate place tonight for partisanship."

Declaring that the peace of mankind transcends political considerations, Johnson said he had this message for the people of the Soviet Union: "There is no American interest in conflict with the Soviet people anywhere. And no true Soviet interest is going to be served by the support of aggression or subversion anywhere in the world.

"We of the United States of America stand ready tonight, as always, to go with you onto the fields of peace."

However, the applause seemed even noisier when the President announced later in his speech that he had ordered the withdrawal of the 2,100 Marines still in the Dominican Republic.

Johnson said the nation's purpose in Santo Domingo and elsewhere "is — and will always be —to serve the peace of mankind."

In an apparent effort to contrast his recent policies with those followed by many countries prior to World War II, Johnson said:

"In the 1930s, we made our fate not by what we did but by what we failed to do. We propelled ourselves —and all mankind — toward tragedy, not by decisiveness but by vacillation, not by determination and resolution but by hesitancy and irresolution, not by action but by inaction."

Money Bills Study Ends

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee finished its study of the money bills Thursday for operation of Missouri's government in the coming fiscal year.

The bills, totaling $356 million in general revenue, were reported into the Senate in a skeleton session and will be ready for Senate debate, perhaps next week.

The usual procedure, however, is that appropriations wind up in a joint conference to work out the differences between the Senate and House.

The total is about $4.3 million less than the House approved and about $5.9 million less than Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended last January.

The committee figures do not include special fee funds or matching federal funds.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said there were few substantial changes made in the bills.

The committee added $2,185,000 for the University of Missouri. That included $800,000 for a new building to house administration of all four campuses and $750,000 for a mathematics systems and computer building for which federal aid will be available.

Longer Truck Bill Signed

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed two more bills today, including one to permit higher and longer trucks to ply Missouri's highways.

It would permit overall height of 13 1/2 feet instead of 12 1/2 feet. Length of a single unit truck could be 40 feet, a tractor-trailer 55 feet, an automobile transport 60 feet and a tractor with more than one trailer 65 feet.

Tradition Rules At Commencement

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- Class reunions and traditional honor luncheons will launch the 123rd annual commencement exercises at the University of Missouri next Monday.

The climax will come Tuesday night in Memorial Stadium when more than 1,800 graduates will receive their degrees.

Dr. Elmer Ellis, the University president, also will confer honorary degrees on three persons. They are Sen. Stuart Symington, who will be the commencement speaker; Dr. Blanche H. Dow, president of Cottey College in Nevada and Paul A. Gorman, New York, president o the Western Electric Co.

James M. Kemper, Sr., Kansas City banker, also was scheduled to receive an honorary degree, but is unable to attend. He will receive the honor at a later commencement.

In case of rain the exercises will be held in Brewer Field House.

Coin Bill Speeded

WASHINGTON AP -- Congress goes to work swiftly today on President Johnson's proposal to reduce sharply the amount of silver in U. S. coins.

A House Banking Committee hearing, with Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and Assistant Secretary Robert A. Wallace as witnesses, was scheduled less than 24 hours after Johnson's message reached Congress.

Johnson's legislation would substitute nickel-copper dimes and quarters for the present silver ones and reduce the silver content of the half-dollar.

Most members of Congress who commented appeared to favor the proposal, if only because they felt the shrinking supply of silver leaves the government little choice.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., Banking and Currency Committee chairman, said: "We have got to do something--and this is good money. Anything the government says is good for the payment of debts and taxes is good money, even if it is made of wood. You could even pay alimony with this."

Patman said he thinks the hearings can be brief, but that spokesman for the vending-machine industry may want to be heard. One of the problems of devising a substitute coinage is to find a combination of metals that will work in machines designed for silver soins.

Lilbourn Scouts Will Camp Out

LILBOURN -- Scouts from Lilbourn's troop 50 with New Madrid Scouts will board a bus at the high school at 12:45 p.m., June 20 on their way for a week's excursion at Camp Lewellan near Silva.

The Scouts will be accompanied by Owen J. Taul, high school principal and Scoutmaster of Troop 50.

Taul reports that since 1941 Lilbourn Scouts have been experiencing the week's encampment each year at Lewellan. He said that this year some of the boys who will make the trip are following in their father's footsteps.

The scoutmaster emphasized that while the camp-out is designed for the boys' pleasure, the week is primarily one of Scout work with each youngster given an opportunity to advance in rank, and leadership. Merit badges may be earned in many areas some of which would be difficult to earn at home.

Each year, the Order of the Arrow call-out ceremony highlights the week's encampment. Scouts who are called-out to be intiated and to receive this honor exemplify the highest qualities of scouting. Taul reports that two Scouts from Lilbourn's troop will be called out.

Mother Will See Two Academy Graduations

ANNAPOLIS, Md. AP -- Weather permitting, Mrs. Raymond W. Vogel Jr. will see two of her sons graduate next Wednesday in separate ceremonies at the military and naval academies.

So after five months of determined effort, she has arranged for Timothy J. Vogel to receive his diploma in an early morning ceremony at West Point, N. Y.

This will give her time to fly to Annapolis for the 11 a.m. exercises where her youngest son, Frederick J. Vogel, will be graduated.

Also making the trip will be Rear Adm. and Mrs. Frederick James Brush, also of Arlington, who have sons graduating from both service academies. Brush is assistant chief of naval operations for logistics.

He is assigned to the Pentagon, where Mrs. Vogel works in the Office of Naval Intelligence.

At least one other couple, Mr. and Mrs. H. Reed Laughlin of Port Huron, Mich., solved the same problem by having each parent attend one ceremony. Cadet Frederick L. Laughlin will be commissioned an Army lieutenant. Midshipman Gary R. Laughlin will become a Navy ensign.

Mrs. Vogel's husband was a naval commander killed in action in the Korean War.

Unable to persuade either to change the time, she came up with the idea of a special ceremony at one school. As a result, Cadet Vogel and Cadet William J. Brush will be awarded diplomas early Wednesday morning at West Point.

Beatle Haircut On Way Out

NEW YORK AP -- A note for cringing parents and graying school principals: it looks as though the phenomenon known as the Beatle haircut may be on its way out.

An Associated Press survey showed today that long, stringy hair is going the way of all fads and, in this case, is winding up on barber shop or home bathroom floors.

The reasons are as numerous as the number of heads that once wore long hair. A teenager in Phoenix, Ariz., said it's just too hot.

"And there are too many singing groups like the Beatles now," he said. "It's no novelty."

An inspection of schoolboy styles around Dallas, Tex., showed the new long-hairs never had an influence there, even with the scores of boys who play in Beatle-type combos.

"The long-hair style is very much on the decline since the Beatles have quieted down and are staying away from this country," said Bill Evans, vice principal at Westport High School in Kansas City. He attributes the about-face to physical education instructors who insist athletes be shorn.

In Florida, there's a basketball team captain, Mike Chase, who must agree. Last December, Miami - Dade Junior College Coach Bill Alheim benched Chase for looking like a refugee from a mop shop, and Miami-Dade lost its next game without Chase who had been averaging 24 points per contest.

However, the survey showed that in some Florida areas the long-hair fad still persists. Another shaggy top region is Southern California where surfers and entertainers go for the style. There, something new has been added: bleached long hair.

Must Win On Ground

WASHINGTON AP -- Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey says air strikes alone won't do the job and the war in Viet Nam will have to be won on the ground by South Vietnamese forces.

Humphrey said in an Associated Press interview he believes that South Vietnamese fighting units -- given sufficient time--can subdue their Communist opponents.

He said he thinks the Viet Cong will call it quits once the Communists become convinced the United States is determined to stay to the end in South Viet Nam.

Humphrey said that while a year or two ago he had deep concern over U. S. involvement in the area he now strongly supports the kind of action President Johnson has taken there.

"I'm still concerned, but I know what we're doing is what we have to do," he said.

The tanker was on a routine mission and approaching a Walker AFB runway when the accident occurred, base spokesmen said.

3-Vehicle Pileup Near City

In a car-truck collision at the junction of Highway 61 and Route H, eight miles south of Sikeston, during a rainstorm last night at 9:20 p.m., an unidentified man was burned to death, and Miss Mary Jo Myers, 17, route two Matthews, was fatally hurt. Miss Myers died today at 8 a.m. in the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

Carroll Lee Rinehart, 42, Belleville, Ill., was driving south on Highway 61, at the Matthews-East Prairie highway junction, in an International tractor - trailer, when a 1951 Chevrolet, driven by Miss Myers pulled out on Highway 61 from Route H, into the path of the large cattle truck.

At the same time a 1965 Ford pickup, presumed to have been traveling north and driven by an unidentified man, with an Indiana truck license, was struck broadside by the International truck. This caused the pickup truck to catch fire and be destroyed. The driver of the pickup was trapped in his cab and burned to death.

Rinehart was not injured.

The driver of the International truck told the state patrol he did not see the small truck, as the truck lights were knocked out when it struck the Myers car and jack-knifed, the cab ending up in the northbound lane and the trailer in the southbound lane.

Traffic was blocked until midnight, and rerouted from the Noxall road through Matthews.

The body of the Indiana man was taken to the Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid, awaiting identification, according to Coroner Leo Hedgepeth, of New Madrid county. An effort was being made to identify him through Indiana plates on the vehicle.

Miss Myers was born March 4, 1948, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Myers, route two, Matthews. She was a student at Matthews high school, and a member of the Nazarene Church.

Surviving besides her parents are three sisters, Mrs. Spatsie Payne, Peoria, Ill., Misses Patsie and Terry Myers and two brothers, James R. Myers, Jr., and Tulley John Myers.

Second Crash At Scene

A second highway accident occurred last night at 9:55 p.m. a half mile from junction of Highway 80 and 61, the scene of an earlier tragedy.

Melvin Cobb, Benton Harbor, Mich., was driving south on Highway 61, and slowed down for traffic passing the first wreckage, when his car was struck by a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Euell Lovell, 29, Blytheville, Ark.

Injured was Ellia Lovell, 23, a passenger in the second car, who was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital and later released.

Plumbers Go Out On Strike

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 318, have gone on strike in a dispute over wages. Their two - year contract expired Tuesday.

Most of the Cape Girardeau contractors are on strike, as well as several shops in Farmington and Ste. Genevieve. In Sikeston only one firm has employes belonging to the union.

The dispute is over basic wage differences, according to a Cape Girardeau member, who said the plumbers had asked $1.15 per hour in wage increases over a three-year period, with the contractors first offer being a 65 cents per hour increase. A compromise was offered by the contractors raising it to 90 cents per hour spread over three years.

The union wants a 25-cent increase the first year, 40 cents the second and 50 cents the third year. The contractors have offered 20 cents, 30 cents and 40 cents per hour over three years. The wage sale for union plumbers is now $4.26 per hour.

There was no immediate effect on large construction work in Cape Girardeau, including school and hospital annex building.

Fighting Heavy In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- Heavy ground fighting continued across South Viet Nam today and government casualties for today and Thursday rose to at least 239 killed, missing or wounded.

Vietnamese troops were caught in two more Communist ambushes, one a followup action by the Reds to an earlier ambush near Lao Thien, about 150 miles northeast of Saigon.

Casualties in the first ambush of a six-vehicle convoy Thursday totaled 15 government troops killed, 15 wounded and 15 missing. Two armored cars were destroyed, two trucks damaged and two machine guns lost. Communist losses were not known.

A relief force sent in a few hours later was hit about seven miles northeast of the first action. The government losses in this engagement were nine killed and 14 wounded. Planes and artillery fire finally routed the guerrillas.

Another ambush occurred near Kontum, about 285 miles northeast of Saigon, where a six-truck convoy was on a food pickup mission. A military spokesman said first reports listed 12 Vietnamese killed and nine missing. There were no reports of Communist losses.

CHICAGO (AP) — President Johnson has told the people of the Soviet Union he wants them to withdraw support of aggression and subversion and join the United States in a common search for peace.

Appearing Thursday night before several thousand Cook County Democrats who paid $100 a plate to hear him deliver his first on-the-record speech to a political audience since the November election, Johnson said at the outset: "I do not believe this is an appropriate place tonight for partisanship."

Declaring that the peace of mankind transcends political considerations, Johnson said he had this message for the people of the Soviet Union: "There is no American interest in conflict with the Soviet people anywhere. And no true Soviet interest is going to be served by the support of aggression or subversion anywhere in the world.

"We of the United States of America stand ready tonight, as always, to go with you onto the fields of peace."

However, the applause seemed even noisier when the President announced later in his speech that he had ordered the withdrawal of the 2,100 Marines still in the Dominican Republic.

Johnson said the nation's purpose in Santo Domingo and elsewhere "is — and will always be —to serve the peace of mankind."

In an apparent effort to contrast his recent policies with those followed by many countries prior to World War II, Johnson said:

"In the 1930s, we made our fate not by what we did but by what we failed to do. We propelled ourselves —and all mankind — toward tragedy, not by decisiveness but by vacillation, not by determination and resolution but by hesitancy and irresolution, not by action but by inaction."

Money Bills Study Ends

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee finished its study of the money bills Thursday for operation of Missouri's government in the coming fiscal year.

The bills, totaling $356 million in general revenue, were reported into the Senate in a skeleton session and will be ready for Senate debate, perhaps next week.

The usual procedure, however, is that appropriations wind up in a joint conference to work out the differences between the Senate and House.

The total is about $4.3 million less than the House approved and about $5.9 million less than Gov. Warren E. Hearnes recommended last January.

The committee figures do not include special fee funds or matching federal funds.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said there were few substantial changes made in the bills.

The committee added $2,185,000 for the University of Missouri. That included $800,000 for a new building to house administration of all four campuses and $750,000 for a mathematics systems and computer building for which federal aid will be available.

Longer Truck Bill Signed

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed two more bills today, including one to permit higher and longer trucks to ply Missouri's highways.

It would permit overall height of 13 1/2 feet instead of 12 1/2 feet. Length of a single unit truck could be 40 feet, a tractor-trailer 55 feet, an automobile transport 60 feet and a tractor with more than one trailer 65 feet.

Tradition Rules At Commencement

COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- Class reunions and traditional honor luncheons will launch the 123rd annual commencement exercises at the University of Missouri next Monday.

The climax will come Tuesday night in Memorial Stadium when more than 1,800 graduates will receive their degrees.

Dr. Elmer Ellis, the University president, also will confer honorary degrees on three persons. They are Sen. Stuart Symington, who will be the commencement speaker; Dr. Blanche H. Dow, president of Cottey College in Nevada and Paul A. Gorman, New York, president o the Western Electric Co.

James M. Kemper, Sr., Kansas City banker, also was scheduled to receive an honorary degree, but is unable to attend. He will receive the honor at a later commencement.

In case of rain the exercises will be held in Brewer Field House.

Coin Bill Speeded

WASHINGTON AP -- Congress goes to work swiftly today on President Johnson's proposal to reduce sharply the amount of silver in U. S. coins.

A House Banking Committee hearing, with Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and Assistant Secretary Robert A. Wallace as witnesses, was scheduled less than 24 hours after Johnson's message reached Congress.

Johnson's legislation would substitute nickel-copper dimes and quarters for the present silver ones and reduce the silver content of the half-dollar.

Most members of Congress who commented appeared to favor the proposal, if only because they felt the shrinking supply of silver leaves the government little choice.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., Banking and Currency Committee chairman, said: "We have got to do something--and this is good money. Anything the government says is good for the payment of debts and taxes is good money, even if it is made of wood. You could even pay alimony with this."

Patman said he thinks the hearings can be brief, but that spokesman for the vending-machine industry may want to be heard. One of the problems of devising a substitute coinage is to find a combination of metals that will work in machines designed for silver soins.

Make no mistake about it. President Lyndon Johnson is a liberal and not a conservative. As a liberal he is more effective than any chief executive in the nation's history because he is an expert in getting Congress to do his bidding.

He accomplishes his result in Congress by an astute combination of flattery, browbeating, threats, reasoning and through the offers of plums and favors. He knows the members of Congress intimately and he has a profound understanding of the legislative process and how it operates. He knows how to make the system work for him and it does.

President Johnson also is an expert in carrying water on both shoulders. He has succeeded in fooling many Americans.

Recently he urged passage of legislation outlawing the ban on the union shop, which now gives states the right to adopt right-to-work laws. In doing this he fulfilled a campaign pledge.

His message to Congress showed no particular enthusiasm for the change and was hailed by conservatives as lukewarm.

President Johnson had succeeded once more in misleading many Americans. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz strongly endorsed congressional action to remove the ban. He could not have done this if President Johnson had not approved of his statement since he is an appointive cabinet officer in the Johnson administration.

President Johnson told a press conference Tuesday that he is sympathetic with reapportionment based on the United States Supreme Court's decision that both houses of state legislatures be set up on a population basis.

This prompted a rather peculiar reaction from Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, who behaved as if he didn't understand what was going on. Dirksen cast himself apparently deliberately as a greenhorn, newcomer to Congress instead of the old professional that he actually is. He may have done this to save face.

Although Johnson already was into the controversy up to his neck, Dirksen piously expressed the hope that he would not inject himself into it. "I don't think he ought to take a position," Dirksen said, ignoring the fact the President had done just that.

One of Senator Dirksen's colleagues has his eyes open. He is Sen. Paul Douglas, the Illinois Democrat, who called the President's statement that he was "generally sympathetic" with one-man, one-vote apportionment "very encouraging."

Our hat is off to President Johnson. When he can present himself as effectively deceiving the Republican majority leader in the United States Senate he really has pulled off a miracle -- a liberal miracle, of course.

The American people may prove themselves to be much smarter on the reapportionment issue than either President Johnson or Senator Douglas. We hope so.

Senator Dirksen is sponsoring a Constitutional amendment to authorize states to submit to their voters the issue of whether they want one house of their legislature to be elected on other than a population basis. He is giving poor leadership to this cause.

LET THE PRESIDENT KNOW

Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act has yet to become a major issue in the 89th Congress, but it mostly likely will before this session ends. Congress is not the only field of battle. It is partly in the mind of President Lyndon Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was elected in 1964 on a Democratic Party platform calling for repeal of 14(b), the Taft-Hartley provision which makes state "right-to-work" laws legal. In his State of the Union address in January, the President said he would "propose to Congress changes in the Taft-Hartley Act including Section 14(b)."

To date the President has not pressed for such change, but neither has he abandoned it. Observers have contended that he is biding his time until other legislative matters of higher priority are disposed of.

Thus there is still time to influence the President to overlook this promise by the use of reason and common sense.

Right -to-work laws, which prevail in 19 of the 50 states, do not prevent unionization. They simply prevent it from taking place through force and coercion. They say, in effect, that an individual in a unionized plant where a contract does not provide for a union shop can refuse to join a union, and that he will not have to make payments in lieu of dues to a union if he chooses to remain separate.

Labor's fight to repeal 14(b) is plainly an effort to gain control over the non-union worker, and to extract payment for him. The fight to retain 14(b) is supported by workers with a sense of independence as much as by business leaders.

The strange thing about President Johnson's support of the labor faction on this issue is that during his many years in Congress he backed such major union regulatory legislation as the Taft-Hartley Act, the Smith-Connally Act and the Landrum-Griffin Act. He voted to override President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947.

If he approved 14(b) so strongly in 1947, it is apparent that his change of position in 1965 is the result of labor pressure springing from its support of the Democratic ticket in the 1964 election. President Johnson also had the support of many non-union working people, and of many businessmen. Therefore he should be open to a hearing of their views, also.

Congress may be in a mood to do as the President bids on this matter. So those who argue for retaining 14(b) -- which has the sanction of the Supreme Court -- would do well to direct their messages to the White House as well as to their congressmen.

TRIBUTE TO "YORKE"

About once in every generation there appears some unusual or outstanding character in every profession, be it medicine or farming, news reporting or teaching.

These unusual characters have that undefinable something that sets them apart from the mob. At the same time they mix and mingle with the rest of us, and are accepted as one of the gang.

Bob Yorke was such an unusual character. He had traveled widely in his youth. He was a foot-slogging Dogface in World War I. He was a musician on a river steamer, the Goldenrod which plied the Ohio, and he also fired the furnaces of the steamer to augment his wages as a music maker.

Bob Yorke was a good newspaper reporter. He was at home with kids and with king-makers, and he had the happy faculty born of experience of sifting out tons of debris to reach the very small yield of pure gold which is part of any meeting, political or otherwise.

Bob died last Sunday morning, and his friends paid their last respects Tuesday afternoon. He was 74.

We will miss his gravelly voiced greeting, his shock of snow white hair, and that half-smoked, pungent cigar, the trademarks of this unusual reporter for the Daily Sikeston Standard.

Today, 680 institutions -- most of them remote convents of missions -- subscribe to these Franciscan Recorded Days of Recollection and about 14,000 records will be sent out this year.

TO JOIN OR NOT TO JOIN?

Great concern is voiced in Washington for the protection of the civil rights of individuals and minority groups.

But what of the right of the American worker to join -- or not to join -- a union? This particular issue doesn't seem to interest those who are in the forefront of the civil rights battle. There is a strange silence about the evil of compulsory unionism and its denial of individual civil and human rights. (Note, we didn't say evil of unionism but rather compulsory unionism.)

The great weight of the federal government is thrown into the human rights movement -- in schooling, in housing, in public accommodations. But what of the human rights of the man who, in order to hold a job, is forced to join an organization that may be diametrically opposed to his principles and views.

In nineteen states that man is protected by the right-to-work laws. And Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Act upholds the states in enacting these laws.

Now, the push is on in Washington to have Congress repeal 14 (b). We don't know what the legislators will do when the issue comes before them, but we do know what the American public thinks.

A national poll shows that the public is against repeal of 14 (b) by more than a two-to-one margin. In fact, nearly two-thirds of the adult public favor a national law making all union membership voluntary.

It is to be hoped that Congress gets the message.

The South is moving out of the economic backwaters of the nation but it is still lagging behind where the arts are concerned, claims a University of North Carolina sociologist.

As a result, a "Culture crisis" is developing.

"The Mason - Dixon line no longer constitutes an Iron curtain against the Affluent Society," says Prof. Rupert B. Vance, writing in the Virginia Quarterly Review.

He notes that personal income in the South rose from 46 per cent of the per capita average outside the South in 1929 to 69 per cent in 1963 --a gain of 23 percentage points in 34 years.

Although some observers believe it will take another 50 years for the South to reach economic parity with the rest of the country, it is already facing the problem of what to do with its new wealth. No purpose will be served, says Vance if the South retains Southern tradition in its "rigid orthodoxy."

"It is precisely this Southern way of life that the rest of the country and probably the rest of the world are getting sick and tired of hearing about," he says.

He challenges the South to "turn from preoccupation with its peculiar navel -- the Southern way of life -- to the pursuit of high culture."

The talent is there. Southern literature, for example, "has solidly established itself as the most important, the most talented, interesting and valuable in the United States."

An economic basis sufficient to furnish markets for culture is developing. What is needed now he says, is leadership from the new class of men of wealth and power as patrons of the arts.

He points to symphony orchestras to be supported in the larger cities, the need for more little theaters and art museums and financial support of universities without attempts to dictate their policies.

"If our newly rich have nothing better to do," Vance asks, "than to harass the few distinguished universities the South has produced, to buy radio time to try to turn back the clock, to prove they are economic Neanderthals by boring into the Republican party and trying to destroy it with racism, who needs them?"

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF TYRANNY

The really successful totalitarian states are built by two kinds of men, theorists who justify unlimited power, and tyrants who use it.

The theorist has the first word. The tyrant has the last.

In almost every case, the man who actually exercises power is a coldly precise realist who knows exactly what he is doing and exactly what it really means. But often, in the early stages of building the total state, the theorists who justify power sincerely believe they can create a kind of utopia.

A fascinating and revealing chapter of history is the record of the theorists of the total state when their dreams finally met the man who would put them into practice. Another part of the same chapter is the story of the wild, undisciplined agitators who play their part in the tyrant's plans by breaking down the established order, only in the end to be crushed themselves beneath his iron heel.

So it was in the French Revolution, when Napoleon Bonaparte rose to power with the cry of "liberty, equality, fraternity", then kept himself in power easily against the late protest of the mob by a "whiff of grapeshot." So it was in the Bolshevik Revolution, when Lenin in power dismissed the last protests of his intellectuals in his famous pamphlet "Left-Wing Communism, an Infantile Disorder."

When the theorist of total power awakens from his dream of utopia to the ultimate reality that the point of the bayonet makes the decision, it is too late for liberty. HLH

A RICE PADDY IN VIET NAM -- AP -- It is said that in wartime there is no higher glory or greater reward than being commander of a company of troops.

He wouldn't trade it right now for any other job on earth.

He talked of it as he lay stretched out under a tent in a dried up rice paddy, loud with insect song.

The heat came down in an endless hammer of glare. Red and gold butterflies shimmered and skittered past and it was hard to think the enemy was only a couple of hills away.

"Once you put the average Marine out in the field his overall outlook on life generally improves. He has a sense of achievement. He feels he is doing what he ought to be doing."

"You don't join the Marines if you are looking for a soft, cushy life."

Pat has put in 13 years. After serving as a corporal in Korea, he quit to get a degree in industrial management from Bowling Green Ohio State University.

But he returned to the corps in 1958. Since then he has attended nine Marine, Army and Navy schools. He has won two medals for bravery, served in Cuba, made 100 parachute jumps and qualified as a demolition expert.

"I'm lucky in the men I have" he said. "They like the excitement of running around the countryside and shooting up the enemy.

Collins, who can put 20 shots a minute from his M14 rifle into a target 500 yards away, has both respect and disdain for the enemy.

"He knows the countryside, and is very deceptive and elusive," Pat said. "He is a master at concealment. He has a kind of circular foxhole in which the cover serves as his hat. He stands up, fires, then stoops and is hidden again.

"But they are lousy shots, real lousy. No guy could shoot that bad and stay in the Marines."

At 32, the captain is completely happy in a Spartan existence under which the meaning of his life is wrapped up by two words --dedication and duty.

"I don't sit around and dream of retiring to a chicken ranch" he said. "I think some people back home make themselves unhappy by being materialistic and selfish.

"I'm happy trying to do a job. It isn't really hard on us out here. I like it. The ones it is hard on are the wives."

"We are saving up to buy furniture," said Pat, "and this is a great place for thrift. There is nothing to spend it on in a rice paddy. But I guess when I get home Mary will want to buy out Buckingham Palace."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — War, no matter what the circumstances, is tragic business. However, the war in Viet Nam has become a lonely war and to some extent a personal war for one man.

This is not because the President began it. It began 18 years ago under the French, was picked up ten years ago by Eisenhower, and increased four years ago by Kennedy.

It's become personal today because the President feels it so keenly and directs it so carefully. Every morning at three he wakes up and calls the White House security room. Three in the morning is about the time the news is in from Viet Nam on the casualties and the hits after each bombing raid.

The President worries over these, broods over them, wants to know, no matter what the hour of the night, just what has happened. If a Cabinet member or sub-Cabinet member calls him at two or four in the morning, he doesn't complain. He has given instructions that they should call no matter what the hour.

One reason for this personal direction is that the President is worried over the possibility of enlarging the war. He knows how easy it is for bomber pilots to make a mistake, or how dangerous it can be to jettison their bombs on their way home.

On the usual wartime bombing raid, a mission will fly over a target, attempt to knock it out; but if the clouds are low or an enemy plane gives trouble, the bombers may drop their pay load indiscriminately on the way back, regardless of military targets.

—TARGETS OF CONCRETE—

Not, however, with the war in Viet Nam. Johnson has given strict orders that only the targets he picks out are to be hit — and these are bridges, ammunition dumps, railroad centers, and military installations.

"We're knocking out concrete, we're not hitting women and children," he has frequently told his aides. And he means it.

At first he griped that the Air Force wasn't able to hit a bridge carrying supplies down from North Viet Nam. Smarting Air Force commanders replied that if they were planning the raid themselves they could knock the bridges. So they sent as many as 22 planes on some raids, literally peppering a bridge with a holocaust of bombs.

Subsequent photos showed that the bridge was knocked out all right, and the Army ribbed the Air Force on using so many planes. But the President, who studies every aerial photograph, considered it important that no civilians were killed.

In addition to his care to avoid civilian casualties he is concerned over any bombing mission which might stray over the line into China or give the Communist Chinese the slightest provocation to enlarge the war.

This is why the war in and over Viet Nam has been a lonely war, a personal war directed by a man who goes to bed well after midnight, but wakes up automatically at 3 a.m. to check on the military targets he has personally pin-pointed.

Under the Constitution, he tells friends, he is charged with the conduct of war. But regardless of the Constitution, he knows that if there are failures, or if the war spreads, he will get the blame. So he is taking the responsibility.

—INSOLUBLE MESS—

When the President outlined his Baltimore peace proposals they were also personal, especially his plan for a giant series of dams on the Mekong River to benefit all the Indo-Chinese countries, including North Viet Nam.

Dams and reclamation projects are something very close to his heart, he having been the father of the Little Colorado Project in Texas when a young Congressman.

Johnson had hoped that this, coupled with his offer of unconditional peace talks, plus joint U.S.-U.S.S.R. aid, might induce the other side to sit down at the conference table. It didn't, for three reasons:

1. North Vietnamese have been winning. Our bombing raids have not stopped the supply of troops and supplies from going south or the guerrilla raids by the Viet Cong.

2. The Russians, who normally might have acted as intermediaries, were put on the spot by our bombing of the North. The Chinese have chided them with being too friendly to the United States in the past, and with forsaking their alleged former role as the champion of small nations. So it's difficult for them to side with the United States now.

3. The Chinese are delighted at the predicament of both Moscow and Washington. They don't want the Vietnamese war to end. The longer it lasts, the more the United States and Russia become at swords' points, and the more the smaller nations of Southeast Asia pull away from the United States into the Red Chinese camp.

In brief, the military advisers who sold the President on the strategy of bombing North Viet Nam failed to understand oriental politics. Though he inherited the Vietnamese problem, they sold him on enlarging it into a mess that could either lead to world war or is almost insoluble without serious loss of face.

—BEHIND THE SCENES—

The CIA is using a mysterious airline that calls itself Air America, to drop weapons and supplies to our guerrilla fighters in Communist-held areas of Laos and Viet Nam. The CIA is trying to give the Reds a taste of their own guerrilla medicine. . . Senate investigators have discovered that the Central Intelligence Agency not only watches suspicious mail, but actually opens the letters as part of its secret intelligence work. However, Senators will protect the CIA, will not reveal this in their probe of government eavesdropping.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Pittsburgh: --When you hear the college youngsters say "I've come clean from Pittsburgh," they mean the old black smoke once belching from the mills has been cleaned into white sky drifts.

So to the newsmen who once covered the Iron City when it was the nation's labor capital, it's all a little strange until they run into the new leaders of the steel union and hear them talk of "organizing the unorganized."

It is as though an old movie newsreel were replaying film clips of massing pickets, stentorian speeches and vast unionizing campaigns.

The spirit of the old CIO is in the new leadership of the United Steelworkers Union --held impatiently in restraint until a contract is signed with the steel industry.

It will be signed peacefully. There will be no steel strike this summer.

There are only a few pennies difference between the demands of the new leadership of I. W. Abel, Joe Molony and Walter J. Burke on one side and the Big Ten steel companies on the other. Thus, if prosperity depends on a peaceful steel settlement, there will be prosperity.

But this does not mean that Iorwith Wilbur Abel will have the time to spend cultivating the tulips and chrysanthemums in his flower garden.

Shortly after the steel industry contracts are signed, Abel and his high command will unleash their new organizing campaigns. Being men of tradition, tempered by manual labor near the old furnaces, impatient with the silk glove "statesmanship" of the Dave McDonald administration which preceded them, they will hark back to their old CIO days.

Special organizing committees will be pin-pointed around the country. Trained organizers will roam across assigned territories in every part of the land.

Non - union plants will be besieged. Perhaps not with the ferocity of the days of sit-ins and mass marches on giant installations. These are not ferocious days. But the unionizing drives will come. There are still big non-union steel plants.

Perhaps the walls will not be physically scaled as in days of old--but efforts will be made to penetrate them far beyond the floors of the furnaces, rollers and ovens. This time, in addition to men of steel, the union of steelworkers will attempt to sign up the white collar people in the offices, the technicians, and others in the automated mills of today.

Drives beget drives. They spread like fever. Smaller unions which were stalled or have been shrinking for years are expected to troop to the steel union headquarters.

They will be supported and invited to merge. The tie that binds will be of metal. It will be in the militant tradition of other lands where all metal workers join in one big union.

There is, for example, the shipbuilding union. Alone, it has had little strength and has lived an almost unknown existence in Camden, N. J., while its president Johnny Grogan, has doubled as mayor of Hoboken in the Garden State.

But with the power of the steel union's big treasury and million members, the union will be reborn and spread into other fields now booming, such as sports and fishing craft.

And, despite the psychiatrists, the filial tie is never truly severed. It was from the miners of old, led by the now 85-year - old behemoth, John L. Lewis, that the steel union sprang.

There's still some coal dust in the veins of I. W. Abel. The United Mine Workers could use him and the union he has just headed. There will be talks and cooperation. And in those talks will be "auto's" Walter Reuther.

Together they represent some 2.5 million in America's basic industries. They will move. And if "Fourteen B"--the Right-to-Work law-- is repealed, they will venture south and southwest.

Perhaps, with the thunder rising out of the Far East, the public has paid little heed to the changing of the old guard in the steel union headquarters here.

If so, the public has overlooked the launching of a new era in its own backyard.

Make no mistake about it. President Lyndon Johnson is a liberal and not a conservative. As a liberal he is more effective than any chief executive in the nation's history because he is an expert in getting Congress to do his bidding.

He accomplishes his result in Congress by an astute combination of flattery, browbeating, threats, reasoning and through the offers of plums and favors. He knows the members of Congress intimately and he has a profound understanding of the legislative process and how it operates. He knows how to make the system work for him and it does.

President Johnson also is an expert in carrying water on both shoulders. He has succeeded in fooling many Americans.

Recently he urged passage of legislation outlawing the ban on the union shop, which now gives states the right to adopt right-to-work laws. In doing this he fulfilled a campaign pledge.

His message to Congress showed no particular enthusiasm for the change and was hailed by conservatives as lukewarm.

President Johnson had succeeded once more in misleading many Americans. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz strongly endorsed congressional action to remove the ban. He could not have done this if President Johnson had not approved of his statement since he is an appointive cabinet officer in the Johnson administration.

President Johnson told a press conference Tuesday that he is sympathetic with reapportionment based on the United States Supreme Court's decision that both houses of state legislatures be set up on a population basis.

This prompted a rather peculiar reaction from Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, who behaved as if he didn't understand what was going on. Dirksen cast himself apparently deliberately as a greenhorn, newcomer to Congress instead of the old professional that he actually is. He may have done this to save face.

Although Johnson already was into the controversy up to his neck, Dirksen piously expressed the hope that he would not inject himself into it. "I don't think he ought to take a position," Dirksen said, ignoring the fact the President had done just that.

One of Senator Dirksen's colleagues has his eyes open. He is Sen. Paul Douglas, the Illinois Democrat, who called the President's statement that he was "generally sympathetic" with one-man, one-vote apportionment "very encouraging."

Our hat is off to President Johnson. When he can present himself as effectively deceiving the Republican majority leader in the United States Senate he really has pulled off a miracle -- a liberal miracle, of course.

The American people may prove themselves to be much smarter on the reapportionment issue than either President Johnson or Senator Douglas. We hope so.

Senator Dirksen is sponsoring a Constitutional amendment to authorize states to submit to their voters the issue of whether they want one house of their legislature to be elected on other than a population basis. He is giving poor leadership to this cause.

LET THE PRESIDENT KNOW

Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act has yet to become a major issue in the 89th Congress, but it mostly likely will before this session ends. Congress is not the only field of battle. It is partly in the mind of President Lyndon Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was elected in 1964 on a Democratic Party platform calling for repeal of 14(b), the Taft-Hartley provision which makes state "right-to-work" laws legal. In his State of the Union address in January, the President said he would "propose to Congress changes in the Taft-Hartley Act including Section 14(b)."

To date the President has not pressed for such change, but neither has he abandoned it. Observers have contended that he is biding his time until other legislative matters of higher priority are disposed of.

Thus there is still time to influence the President to overlook this promise by the use of reason and common sense.

Right -to-work laws, which prevail in 19 of the 50 states, do not prevent unionization. They simply prevent it from taking place through force and coercion. They say, in effect, that an individual in a unionized plant where a contract does not provide for a union shop can refuse to join a union, and that he will not have to make payments in lieu of dues to a union if he chooses to remain separate.

Labor's fight to repeal 14(b) is plainly an effort to gain control over the non-union worker, and to extract payment for him. The fight to retain 14(b) is supported by workers with a sense of independence as much as by business leaders.

The strange thing about President Johnson's support of the labor faction on this issue is that during his many years in Congress he backed such major union regulatory legislation as the Taft-Hartley Act, the Smith-Connally Act and the Landrum-Griffin Act. He voted to override President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947.

If he approved 14(b) so strongly in 1947, it is apparent that his change of position in 1965 is the result of labor pressure springing from its support of the Democratic ticket in the 1964 election. President Johnson also had the support of many non-union working people, and of many businessmen. Therefore he should be open to a hearing of their views, also.

Congress may be in a mood to do as the President bids on this matter. So those who argue for retaining 14(b) -- which has the sanction of the Supreme Court -- would do well to direct their messages to the White House as well as to their congressmen.

TRIBUTE TO "YORKE"

About once in every generation there appears some unusual or outstanding character in every profession, be it medicine or farming, news reporting or teaching.

These unusual characters have that undefinable something that sets them apart from the mob. At the same time they mix and mingle with the rest of us, and are accepted as one of the gang.

Bob Yorke was such an unusual character. He had traveled widely in his youth. He was a foot-slogging Dogface in World War I. He was a musician on a river steamer, the Goldenrod which plied the Ohio, and he also fired the furnaces of the steamer to augment his wages as a music maker.

Bob Yorke was a good newspaper reporter. He was at home with kids and with king-makers, and he had the happy faculty born of experience of sifting out tons of debris to reach the very small yield of pure gold which is part of any meeting, political or otherwise.

Bob died last Sunday morning, and his friends paid their last respects Tuesday afternoon. He was 74.

We will miss his gravelly voiced greeting, his shock of snow white hair, and that half-smoked, pungent cigar, the trademarks of this unusual reporter for the Daily Sikeston Standard.

TO JOIN OR NOT TO JOIN?

Great concern is voiced in Washington for the protection of the civil rights of individuals and minority groups.

But what of the right of the American worker to join -- or not to join -- a union? This particular issue doesn't seem to interest those who are in the forefront of the civil rights battle. There is a strange silence about the evil of compulsory unionism and its denial of individual civil and human rights. (Note, we didn't say evil of unionism but rather compulsory unionism.)

The great weight of the federal government is thrown into the human rights movement -- in schooling, in housing, in public accommodations. But what of the human rights of the man who, in order to hold a job, is forced to join an organization that may be diametrically opposed to his principles and views.

In nineteen states that man is protected by the right-to-work laws. And Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Act upholds the states in enacting these laws.

Now, the push is on in Washington to have Congress repeal 14 (b). We don't know what the legislators will do when the issue comes before them, but we do know what the American public thinks.

A national poll shows that the public is against repeal of 14 (b) by more than a two-to-one margin. In fact, nearly two-thirds of the adult public favor a national law making all union membership voluntary.

It is to be hoped that Congress gets the message.

The South is moving out of the economic backwaters of the nation but it is still lagging behind where the arts are concerned, claims a University of North Carolina sociologist.

As a result, a "Culture crisis" is developing.

"The Mason - Dixon line no longer constitutes an Iron curtain against the Affluent Society," says Prof. Rupert B. Vance, writing in the Virginia Quarterly Review.

He notes that personal income in the South rose from 46 per cent of the per capita average outside the South in 1929 to 69 per cent in 1963 --a gain of 23 percentage points in 34 years.

Although some observers believe it will take another 50 years for the South to reach economic parity with the rest of the country, it is already facing the problem of what to do with its new wealth. No purpose will be served, says Vance if the South retains Southern tradition in its "rigid orthodoxy."

"It is precisely this Southern way of life that the rest of the country and probably the rest of the world are getting sick and tired of hearing about," he says.

He challenges the South to "turn from preoccupation with its peculiar navel -- the Southern way of life -- to the pursuit of high culture."

The talent is there. Southern literature, for example, "has solidly established itself as the most important, the most talented, interesting and valuable in the United States."

An economic basis sufficient to furnish markets for culture is developing. What is needed now he says, is leadership from the new class of men of wealth and power as patrons of the arts.

He points to symphony orchestras to be supported in the larger cities, the need for more little theaters and art museums and financial support of universities without attempts to dictate their policies.

"If our newly rich have nothing better to do," Vance asks, "than to harass the few distinguished universities the South has produced, to buy radio time to try to turn back the clock, to prove they are economic Neanderthals by boring into the Republican party and trying to destroy it with racism, who needs them?"

"We're knocking out concrete, we're not hitting women and children," he has frequently told his aides. And he means it.

At first he griped that the Air Force wasn't able to hit a bridge carrying supplies down from North Viet Nam. Smarting Air Force commanders replied that if they were planning the raid themselves they could knock the bridges. So they sent as many as 22 planes on some raids, literally peppering a bridge with a holocaust of bombs.

Subsequent photos showed that the bridge was knocked out all right, and the Army ribbed the Air Force on using so many planes. But the President, who studies every aerial photograph, considered it important that no civilians were killed.

In addition to his care to avoid civilian casualties he is concerned over any bombing mission which might stray over the line into China or give the Communist Chinese the slightest provocation to enlarge the war.

This is why the war in and over Viet Nam has been a lonely war, a personal war directed by a man who goes to bed well after midnight, but wakes up automatically at 3 a.m. to check on the military targets he has personally pin-pointed.

Under the Constitution, he tells friends, he is charged with the conduct of war. But regardless of the Constitution, he knows that if there are failures, or if the war spreads, he will get the blame. So he is taking the responsibility.

—INSOLUBLE MESS—

When the President outlined his Baltimore peace proposals they were also personal, especially his plan for a giant series of dams on the Mekong River to benefit all the Indo-Chinese countries, including North Viet Nam.

Dams and reclamation projects are something very close to his heart, he having been the father of the Little Colorado Project in Texas when a young Congressman.

Johnson had hoped that this, coupled with his offer of unconditional peace talks, plus joint U.S.-U.S.S.R. aid, might induce the other side to sit down at the conference table. It didn't, for three reasons:

1. North Vietnamese have been winning. Our bombing raids have not stopped the supply of troops and supplies from going south or the guerrilla raids by the Viet Cong.

2. The Russians, who normally might have acted as intermediaries, were put on the spot by our bombing of the North. The Chinese have chided them with being too friendly to the United States in the past, and with forsaking their alleged former role as the champion of small nations. So it's difficult for them to side with the United States now.

3. The Chinese are delighted at the predicament of both Moscow and Washington. They don't want the Vietnamese war to end. The longer it lasts, the more the United States and Russia become at swords' points, and the more the smaller nations of Southeast Asia pull away from the United States into the Red Chinese camp.

In brief, the military advisers who sold the President on the strategy of bombing North Viet Nam failed to understand oriental politics. Though he inherited the Vietnamese problem, they sold him on enlarging it into a mess that could either lead to world war or is almost insoluble without serious loss of face.

—BEHIND THE SCENES—

The CIA is using a mysterious airline that calls itself Air America, to drop weapons and supplies to our guerrilla fighters in Communist-held areas of Laos and Viet Nam. The CIA is trying to give the Reds a taste of their own guerrilla medicine. . . Senate investigators have discovered that the Central Intelligence Agency not only watches suspicious mail, but actually opens the letters as part of its secret intelligence work. However, Senators will protect the CIA, will not reveal this in their probe of government eavesdropping.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Pittsburgh: --When you hear the college youngsters say "I've come clean from Pittsburgh," they mean the old black smoke once belching from the mills has been cleaned into white sky drifts.

So to the newsmen who once covered the Iron City when it was the nation's labor capital, it's all a little strange until they run into the new leaders of the steel union and hear them talk of "organizing the unorganized."

It is as though an old movie newsreel were replaying film clips of massing pickets, stentorian speeches and vast unionizing campaigns.

The spirit of the old CIO is in the new leadership of the United Steelworkers Union --held impatiently in restraint until a contract is signed with the steel industry.

It will be signed peacefully. There will be no steel strike this summer.

There are only a few pennies difference between the demands of the new leadership of I. W. Abel, Joe Molony and Walter J. Burke on one side and the Big Ten steel companies on the other. Thus, if prosperity depends on a peaceful steel settlement, there will be prosperity.

But this does not mean that Iorwith Wilbur Abel will have the time to spend cultivating the tulips and chrysanthemums in his flower garden.

Shortly after the steel industry contracts are signed, Abel and his high command will unleash their new organizing campaigns. Being men of tradition, tempered by manual labor near the old furnaces, impatient with the silk glove "statesmanship" of the Dave McDonald administration which preceded them, they will hark back to their old CIO days.

Special organizing committees will be pin-pointed around the country. Trained organizers will roam across assigned territories in every part of the land.

Non - union plants will be besieged. Perhaps not with the ferocity of the days of sit-ins and mass marches on giant installations. These are not ferocious days. But the unionizing drives will come. There are still big non-union steel plants.

Perhaps the walls will not be physically scaled as in days of old--but efforts will be made to penetrate them far beyond the floors of the furnaces, rollers and ovens. This time, in addition to men of steel, the union of steelworkers will attempt to sign up the white collar people in the offices, the technicians, and others in the automated mills of today.

Drives beget drives. They spread like fever. Smaller unions which were stalled or have been shrinking for years are expected to troop to the steel union headquarters.

They will be supported and invited to merge. The tie that binds will be of metal. It will be in the militant tradition of other lands where all metal workers join in one big union.

There is, for example, the shipbuilding union. Alone, it has had little strength and has lived an almost unknown existence in Camden, N. J., while its president Johnny Grogan, has doubled as mayor of Hoboken in the Garden State.

But with the power of the steel union's big treasury and million members, the union will be reborn and spread into other fields now booming, such as sports and fishing craft.

And, despite the psychiatrists, the filial tie is never truly severed. It was from the miners of old, led by the now 85-year - old behemoth, John L. Lewis, that the steel union sprang.

There's still some coal dust in the veins of I. W. Abel. The United Mine Workers could use him and the union he has just headed. There will be talks and cooperation. And in those talks will be "auto's" Walter Reuther.

Together they represent some 2.5 million in America's basic industries. They will move. And if "Fourteen B"--the Right-to-Work law-- is repealed, they will venture south and southwest.

Perhaps, with the thunder rising out of the Far East, the public has paid little heed to the changing of the old guard in the steel union headquarters here.

If so, the public has overlooked the launching of a new era in its own backyard.

The Modern Christian

Is the Bible the supreme source of communication from God?

In the Old Testament God, step by step, through human institutions, human words, and human persons, revealed Himself.

The prophets, for example, were prompted by God and communicated to His people the message of salvation.

This verbalized expression is surpassed by the person of the prophet himself. What the prophet stood for, what he was, how he lived, was a living message of the spirit of God working in him. The prophet attempted to communicate through all his actions the power of God. A person, the prophet, was God's medium of communication to his people.

The coming of Christ moves man into an entirely new dimension of communication. Christ is the Person of Communication. He is Communication: He is the Word.

Technically, we refer to Christ's entry into the stream of humanity as the Incarnation.

This revelation to man from God the Father is God the Son. The Son reveals himself to us by his human words and human actions. The words and actions are a medium of communication for the understanding of the Person who is with us always.

This is not something we fashion ourselves. This is something we discover by going back to the Word of God as we find it in Scripture which is the record of the faith of the early Christian community.

The Christian message, the Christian revelation, is Christ. Later, we will have to discuss the multiple dimensions of Christ's Person. Suffice it here, that God communicates through the fully human; in particular, a God become man.

Cards Bomb Koufax But L.A. Wins Contest 11 to 10

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals broke out of their hitting slump Thursday night, but they didn't count on a one-man assault by the Los Angeles Dodgers' Ron Fairly.

Fairly, one of the best clutch-hitters in the major leagues, dumped reliever Barney Shultz' eight-inning offering onto the right field pavillion roof to drive in two runs and give the Dodgers an 11-10 victory.

It was the eighth time this season the Los Angeles first baseman-outfielder drive in the winning run for the Dodgers.

Fairly began his assault in the second inning with a run-scoring double. He then climaxed a four-run rally in the fourth with a run-producing single that tied the game, 7-7.

All-in-all, he scored twice on three hits that accounted for three runs in five times at bat.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, sent Sandy Koufax to the showers with five unearned runs in the second inning and two earned runs in the third and chalked up 14 hits for the night.

Their ten runs almost matched the 14 they had scored in the last nine games. Three of Thursday night's runs were homers — Ken Boyer's fifth, Bob Skinner's second and Julian Javier's first of the season.

Houston, which handed St. Louis three losses — two in extra innings — last week in the astrodome, will meet the Cardinals tonight at Busch Stadium. Bob Gibson will seek his ninth victory against two losses, facing the Astros' Dick Farrell 4-1.

The Athletics, who were idle Thursday, will send Roland Sheldon (0-1) against Boston's Early Wilson (3-4) in Kansas City tonight.

Potlatch Forrest lost its first game of the year, as they met up with a tough crew from Scott City and were downed 7 to 5.

Spear started on the hill for Sikeston but was relieved in the third by Stallings. Brant went all the way for Scott City and picked up his first win of the season.

Potlatch was led in hitting by Terry James who had two hits in the contest. James banged out a triple in the first inning. He scored Sikeston's first run in that frame. Owens, Heath, McClain and Metz had one hit each for Potlatch. Potlatch had six hits in the contest.

Stallings was the losing pitcher for the Forresters, he was relieved by Payne in the sixth inning.

Potlatch Forrest next game is against Bloomfield, there, Monday, June 7. They will be going for their third win of the season.

Young Steve Spray Leads In Buick Open Tournament

Spray, 24, playing in his seventh tournament and yet to win a penny, fashioned a brilliant 32-36-68 over the Warwick Hills Golf and County Club course. The links yielded only 11 subpar rounds on opening day as 144 pros tussled with the par 72 course.

Among the score scrambling to survive the cut to the low 70-plus ties today was U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi. In one of his last major warmups in preparation of defense for his crown, he had a 76.

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were among 20 pros deadlocked at 73. Bruce Crampton, No. 2 money winner and the only three-time winner of this season's tour, had a 77.

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced he has recommended the National Football League add two teams for a total of 16 by 1967.

Informed of the announcement by The Associated Press, Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League said the AFL might do it sooner, perhaps putting two new teams on the field by 1966.

Then they started ticking off potential expansion targets. Between the two of them they covered most of the major cities in the United States and Canada, including some in the rival league.

In a Thursday night news conference, Rozelle named 12 "major cities which have expressed an interest in an NFL franchise."

They are Montreal, Toronto, Boston, Miami, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Houston, Memphis, Phoenix, Seattle and Portland.

When it was pointed out that Boston and Houston already had teams in the rival AFL, Rozelle said:

But Foss had some particular feelings.

"There's plenty of room for both of us," said the commissioner of the five-year-old, eight-team league. "There are any number of cities that can support pro football and any number that can support two teams."

Then he ticked off his list: Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Atlanta, New Orleans, Miami, Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, Portland, Louisville, Memphis, Seattle, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia and Los Angeles all have teams in the 45-year-old NFL and Milwaukee supports the Green Bay Packers, some 60 miles away.

At present, only New York has a team in each league and a two-team trial in Dallas didn't work out, with the AFL team moving to Kansas City. Both leagues are now armed with millions of dollars in television money and are looking for new markets

Their ten runs almost matched the 14 they had scored in the last nine games. Three of Thursday night's runs were homers — Ken Boyer's fifth, Bob Skinner's second and Julian Javier's first of the season.

Houston, which handed St. Louis three losses — two in extra innings — last week in the astrodome, will meet the Cardinals tonight at Busch Stadium. Bob Gibson will seek his ninth victory against two losses, facing the Astros' Dick Farrell 4-1.

The Athletics, who were idle Thursday, will send Roland Sheldon (0-1) against Boston's Early Wilson (3-4) in Kansas City tonight.

First Methodist 2
First Christian 1

Sikeston's Church League got into its second night of action last night before the rains fell and canceled the last contest of the evening. First Baptist was ahead of Bement Baptist 6 to 0, in the top of the four before the game had to be canceled. That game will be played at a later date.

In the first contest of the night, First Methodist edged a hard fighting First Christian team 2 to 1. First Methodist pitcher M. Hixon went the distance on the mound allowing only two hits in the contest.

The winners blased out 12 hits. Sapperfield, Mike Hixon and J. Strowe paced the hitting attack for First Methodist as they banged out 2 hits each. Floyd Presley, First Christian pitcher, also had two hits in the contest.

Potlatch Forrest lost its first game of the year, as they met up with a tough crew from Scott City and were downed 7 to 5.

Potlatch who had started off the season with a double win over Afton's Khoury Leaguers, just couldn't stop Scott City's hitting attack, as they went down in defeat.

Spear started on the hill for Sikeston but was relieved in the third by Stallings. Brant went all the way for Scott City and picked up his first win of the season.

Potlatch was led in hitting by Terry James who had two hits in the contest. James banged out a triple in the first inning. He scored Sikeston's first run in that frame. Owens, Heath, McClain and Metz had one hit each for Potlatch. Potlatch had six hits in the contest.

Stallings was the losing pitcher for the Forresters, he was relieved by Payne in the sixth inning.

Potlatch Forrest next game is against Bloomfield, there, Monday, June 7. They will be going for their third win of the season.

Young Steve Spray Leads In Buick Open Tournament

Spray, 24, playing in his seventh tournament and yet to win a penny, fashioned a brilliant 32-36-68 over the Warwick Hills Golf and County Club course. The links yielded only 11 subpar rounds on opening day as 144 pros tussled with the par 72 course.

Among the score scrambling to survive the cut to the low 70-plus ties today was U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi. In one of his last major warmups in preparation of defense for his crown, he had a 76.

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were among 20 pros deadlocked at 73. Bruce Crampton, No. 2 money winner and the only three-time winner of this season's tour, had a 77.

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced he has recommended the National Football League add two teams for a total of 16 by 1967.

Informed of the announcement by The Associated Press, Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League said the AFL might do it sooner, perhaps putting two new teams on the field by 1966.

Then they started ticking off potential expansion targets. Between the two of them they covered most of the major cities in the United States and Canada, including some in the rival league.

In a Thursday night news conference, Rozelle named 12 "major cities which have expressed an interest in an NFL franchise."

They are Montreal, Toronto, Boston, Miami, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Houston, Memphis, Phoenix, Seattle and Portland.

When it was pointed out that Boston and Houston already had teams in the rival AFL, Rozelle said:

But Foss had some particular feelings.

"There's plenty of room for both of us," said the commissioner of the five-year-old, eight-team league. "There are any number of cities that can support pro football and any number that can support two teams."

Then he ticked off his list: Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Atlanta, New Orleans, Miami, Columbus and Dayton, Ohio, Portland, Louisville, Memphis, Seattle, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia and Los Angeles all have teams in the 45-year-old NFL and Milwaukee supports the Green Bay Packers, some 60 miles away.

At present, only New York has a team in each league and a two-team trial in Dallas didn't work out, with the AFL team moving to Kansas City. Both leagues are now armed with millions of dollars in television money and are looking for new markets

Fertility & Sterility

But what about the childless couples — the 10 per cent of marriages (the figure varies little from country to country) in which the husband cannot fertilize or the wife cannot conceive?

At one time the wife was invariably considered responsible for barren marriages. Physicians know now, though, that husbands are the source of the difficulty in almost half of the cases.

Unfortunately, some men feel that this suggestion is a reflection on their "masculinity." This is an enduring belief but a myth — there is no connection between sexual virility and biological fertility. As this recognition grows, more husbands are willing to join with their wives in inferility examinations.

In the management of fertility, the physician first rules out or treats such overt problems as infections or poor state of general health. He does not exclude the possibility of malnutrition inasmuch as there is a correlation between prolonged poor diet and malfunction of the reproductive apparatus.

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTOR

Some physicians also look for psychogenic causes — a vexing problem lacking clear answers. There are schools which doubt that emotional tension can play a causative role in infertility. Some studies, for example, fail to support the belief that a significant number of childless women conceive soon after adopting a child. On the other hand, there are infertile women who conceive shortly after making an appointment for examination. And one pathologist has shown that medical students produce far fewer normal sperm cells during major examination periods than at other times. For many doctors, emotions remain in a gray area.

QUANTITY AND QUALITY

In the male, physiological infertility can take several forms and is usually a matter of degree. Either too few sperm cells are formed in the seminiferous tubules of the testicular apparatus (oligospermia) or the sperm that exist lack motility — the ability to drive through the cervix and into the Fallopian tubes. (Occasionally a tubal blockage prevents the transmission of sperm, but patency can usually be gained by surgery.)

Sperm counts can fall within a wide range and still be considered normal. Counts above 60,000,000 per milliliter of semen are generally effective, but some specimens contain as many as 300,000,000 spermatozoa.

As for motility, the minimum standard established by the American Society for the Study of Sterility calls for 60 to 70 per cent of spermatozoa to be in this state a little more than two hours after the specimen has been ejaculated.

Considerable success has been achieved in the correction of male infertility since the discovery that a disproportionate number of spermatozoa are contained in one section of the ejaculate. With the "split-ejaculate" technique, the first part of a husband's sperm is segregated and given to the wife as a concentrate via artificial insemination.

Under study now, too, is a method of freezing several split-ejaculate specimens to build a larger concentrate. And in still another experimental effort, semen is centrifuged to concentrate the sperm. But here a method must be found to avoid injury to spermatozoa caused by the centrifuging itself.

Male infertility has also been attacked through the hormonal route. Although androgen, the male hormone, probably does not stimulate spermatogenesis directly, it is believed that normal sperm production cannot occur with inadequate androgenic function. In some cases, androgen flow has been stimulated by the administration of a substance which contains luteinizing hormone. (Oddly or not, the substance is chorionic gonadotropin, obtained from the urine of pregnant women.)

And finally, the problem of immunity is now receiving much attention. Couples with otherwise normal reproductive capacities can become victims of a biologic paradox. In a sense, the wife becomes "vaccinated" against pregnancy. This happens through an immunologic reaction of the kind that stimulates the body to produce antibodies against invading pathogens. Since spermatozoa are "foreign invaders," some become coated with antibodies as they enter the female reproductive tract and are rendered nonfertilizable. To overcome this problem, physicians have been recommending a period of sexual abstinence, coitus interruptus, or use of a condom — anything to keep the sperm out of the female tract for a while to prevent the buildup of immunity. In some couples the gambit has been successful. After two to six months, no sperm antibodies were being formed in the wives and some pregnancies followed.

Cookout 'Tools' Needed For Summer Barbecue

This summer the tantalizing aromas from backyard cookouts will float through the air and titillate appetites as never before, as more and more families discover the barbecue way of cooking.

When Americans first adopted the barbecue as a favorite form of summer cookery, the equipment used resembled implements used by the cave man. They were often improvised.

Today all this is changed and many a barbecue enthusiast is as particular about the "tools" for his culinary pursuits as the dedicated hunter, fisherman or golfer.

With the barbecue, the man of the house usually comes into his own as the "chef" and like all good craftsmen, wants good tools.

To get ready for your summer cookouts, take inventory and make a list of items needed for a well-equipped barbecue, suggests Anne Winfield, home adviser for F. W. Woolworth Co.

Here is a list of items needed: a good-sized charcoal grill and charcoal starters, a five-piece barbecue tool set, chef's apron, mitt and hat, grill cover, patio lights, a hamburger press, skewers, turners and a set of stackable patio tables.

This might seem to involve a sizable expenditure, but actually all of this equipment can be purchased for less than $40, the Woolworth home adviser says.

With the "tools" for cooking provided for the head of the family, the wife can supply the sauces, condiments, napkins and paper plates to complete the ensemble.

If so, a "cookout" can be held at a moment's notice.

By Bil Keane
(The Family Circus)

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 5, 1922. Until I was ten I drew nothing but criticism. Didn't always spell my first name BIL. My parents named me Bill, but when I started cartooning on the walls, they knocked the "L" out of me.

Graduated from Northeast Catholic High School in Philly where I was art editor of the monthly school magazine. I ain't never went to no college.

Taught myself to draw by imitating my favorite cartoonists in the magazines and newspapers. Three year Army hitch in Southwest Pacific Area. Wound up as a staff sergeant on STARS AND STRIPES IN TOKYO doing a daily cartoon. "AT EASE WITH THE JAPANESE."

Worked as staff cartoonist on the Philadelphia Bulletin from 1946 to 1959 and created a Sunday comic feature, "SILLY PHILLY", which is still read weekly by "nearly everybody" in Philadelphia.

In 1948, remembered my wartime sweetheart in Australia, Thelma Carne, and flew down under where we started our own population explosion: Gayle, Neal, Glen, Chris and Jeff. (Present ages left to right: 11, 9, 7, 4 and 3). Thel passes on everything that comes off my drawing board. She is the most kissable editor I have met. (And a lot prettier than Charlie Blanton).

Started "CHANNEL CHUCKLES" for you fellers in 1954. As of July 7, 1961, I will have drawn 4,001 cartoons on the subject of television without burning out a picture tube.

I use no gag writers and create all my situations myself. I draw entirely with a crow quill pen and work very fast. I rough out six gags at a time, pencil in the six and then ink them as the mail truck is bounding across the desert toward my studio.

"THE FAMILY CIRCUS" came to town in February, 1960. All the gags for this feature are right out of my own home. The characters in the feature are counterparts of the various characters found in abundance lying in disorder in the Keane home. I work with one eye on the drawing board, my other eye on the calendar, and my OTHER eye peering at the back lawn and the antics of the five little Keanes. I just draw what I see.

I do occasional cartoons for the major magazines, though, before syndication, I was selling regularly to the top markets. The Saturday Evening Post prints my "PUN-ABRIDGED DICTIONARY" from time to time as a feature on the Postscripts page.

I like puns. To me they are the number one form of humor. (And there is nothing lower than number one.) In my upcoming Sunday "FAMILY CIRCUS" page, I intend giving a good play to this brand of humor which scores highly with the younger set (and the older set, and those in between).

Lived for years (ten to be exact) in a small mortgaged home in Roslyn, Pennsylvania (just outside of Philadelphia). We packed up our toy boxes and moved to Scottsdale, Arizona, in 1959 where we now live in a LARGE mortgaged home. We like it here among the cactus, sunbeams and land speculators.

I love to draw cartoons and consider myself one of the luckier citizens to be paid for doing what I like to do best.

By John Abney

Mexico City -- A scientific pamphlet published here says the loud booms you keep hearing are no sonic booms but the population boom echoing around our planet at the rate of 100,000 new persons a day.

At the present time, this pamphlet says, nobody knows just how many inhabitants we have because so many people have put their minds on things other than work that it is a matter of speculation.

Mexico has one of the fastest growing populations in the world and to illustrate a point, the writer of this article says that a pair of pedigreed fish put into a pond will start a very curious process of multiplication. They double their numbers each year.

The article says that in the simple case of 2x2x2 etc. for 50 years, the pond winds up with more than one quintillion fish. And it says if the fish were sparrows that weighed one ounce each, you would have 35 billion tons of sparrows.

About the only thing I can see that this proves is you would need a barn 100 miles long and a mile and a half wide to house 35 billion tons of sparrows. It would need very strong rafters and would have a pretty untidy floor.

Where is the population boom taking us? the writer asks.

I cannot answer for the fish and sparrow problem. But I can give the gentlemen some information on the boom around the Abney household.

The latest little explosion is a five-months-old contribution to professional football. At this fragile age, Mr. Jim prefers to make his own decisions and his thinking is unswayed by fingerpointing threats of violence.

It is not my fault. He takes after his mother, a flightly lady who will plant a right cross on my chops if she ever reads this.

The rest of the family spoils Mr. Jim and they sabotage my efforts to bring him up properly.

It is a well known fact that five-months-old people like to have their way in everything and this is what I wish to avoid.

"Guess I will exercise my lungs," he mutters to himself. And Mr. Jim has very powerful lungs. "Things are a little quiet so maybe we should put some life into the party. YE-E-E-O-OW!"

The rest of the clan pays no attention to this shouting. If an adult stands around bellowing in such a fashion he is arrested for disturbing the peace and the law makes him pay a fine.

The same thing should apply to small persons because it is not good to let them get away with screeching just because they happen to like screeching.

So on these occasions I override the objections of the family and put a firm fist on the table so they understand punishment WILL BE dealt out and the head of the family tolerates no monkey business.

Since Mr. Jim has no money to pay a fine I grasp him firmly and take him to a torture device known as the Rocking Chair. And I rock him into a state of unconsciousness.

Let them protest that it is too severe for such a small party. One thing he is going to learn at an early age is that he cannot lie there shouting just because he feels like it.

I don't know about the rest of the planet's new inhabitants but nobody is going to spoil my child.

100 To Enroll In Head Start

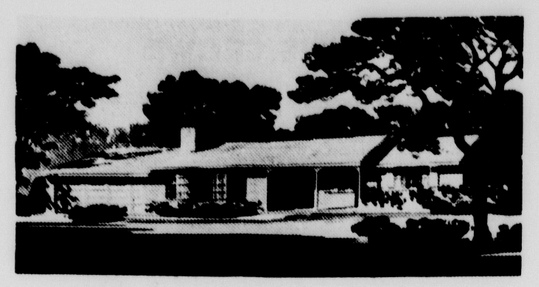

PORTAGEVILLE -- Operation "Head Start," designed to help children of disadvantage families to be better prepared to meet classroom situations when school re-convenes in September, will get underway here beginning June 21, and lasting for eight weeks according to an announcement made this week by Tom Park, superintendent of Portageville schools.

In this program, children, who will attend school for the first time next year, will enroll in classes to be held from 8 a.m. until noon. In these classes the children will be taught the proper use of scissors, crayons, restroom facilities, eating utensils, other school equipment, and etiquette.

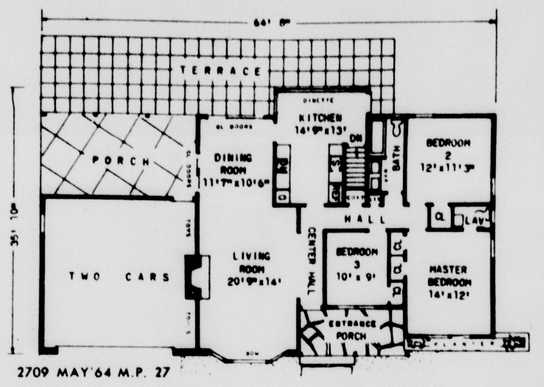

Superintendent Park said that approximately 150 children are expected to enroll in the first grade in September. Approximately 100 will enroll in Head Start.

Seven teachers, one director, and one other paid leader will make up the instructional and supervisory staff for the program. Park said that no teacher will teach more than 15 pupils. He said that helpers will be needed. He intimated that this force might be made up of mothers of the children.

THE INFERTILITY PROBLEM

But what about the childless couples — the 10 per cent of marriages (the figure varies little from country to country) in which the husband cannot fertilize or the wife cannot conceive?

At one time the wife was invariably considered responsible for barren marriages. Physicians know now, though, that husbands are the source of the difficulty in almost half of the cases.

Unfortunately, some men feel that this suggestion is a reflection on their "masculinity." This is an enduring belief but a myth — there is no connection between sexual virility and biological fertility. As this recognition grows, more husbands are willing to join with their wives in inferility examinations.

In the management of fertility, the physician first rules out or treats such overt problems as infections or poor state of general health. He does not exclude the possibility of malnutrition inasmuch as there is a correlation between prolonged poor diet and malfunction of the reproductive apparatus.

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTOR

Some physicians also look for psychogenic causes — a vexing problem lacking clear answers. There are schools which doubt that emotional tension can play a causative role in infertility. Some studies, for example, fail to support the belief that a significant number of childless women conceive soon after adopting a child. On the other hand, there are infertile women who conceive shortly after making an appointment for examination. And one pathologist has shown that medical students produce far fewer normal sperm cells during major examination periods than at other times. For many doctors, emotions remain in a gray area.

QUANTITY AND QUALITY

In the male, physiological infertility can take several forms and is usually a matter of degree. Either too few sperm cells are formed in the seminiferous tubules of the testicular apparatus (oligospermia) or the sperm that exist lack motility — the ability to drive through the cervix and into the Fallopian tubes. (Occasionally a tubal blockage prevents the transmission of sperm, but patency can usually be gained by surgery.)

Sperm counts can fall within a wide range and still be considered normal. Counts above 60,000,000 per milliliter of semen are generally effective, but some specimens contain as many as 300,000,000 spermatozoa.

As for motility, the minimum standard established by the American Society for the Study of Sterility calls for 60 to 70 per cent of spermatozoa to be in this state a little more than two hours after the specimen has been ejaculated.

Considerable success has been achieved in the correction of male infertility since the discovery that a disproportionate number of spermatozoa are contained in one section of the ejaculate. With the "split-ejaculate" technique, the first part of a husband's sperm is segregated and given to the wife as a concentrate via artificial insemination.

Under study now, too, is a method of freezing several split-ejaculate specimens to build a larger concentrate. And in still another experimental effort, semen is centrifuged to concentrate the sperm. But here a method must be found to avoid injury to spermatozoa caused by the centrifuging itself.

Male infertility has also been attacked through the hormonal route. Although androgen, the male hormone, probably does not stimulate spermatogenesis directly, it is believed that normal sperm production cannot occur with inadequate androgenic function. In some cases, androgen flow has been stimulated by the administration of a substance which contains lutelnizing hormone. (Oddly or not, the substance is chorionic gonadotropin, obtained from the urine of pregnant women.)

And finally, the problem of immunity is now receiving much attention. Couples with otherwise normal reproductive capacities can become victims of a biologic paradox. In a sense, the wife becomes "vaccinated" against pregnancy. This happens through an immunologic reaction of the kind that stimulates the body to produce antibodies against invading pathogens. Since spermatozoa are "foreign invaders," some become coated with antibodies as they enter the female reproductive tract and are rendered nonfertilizable. To overcome this problem, physicians have been recommending a period of sexual abstinence, coitus interruptus, or use of a condom — anything to keep the sperm out of the female tract for a while to prevent the buildup of immunity. In some couples the gambit has been successful. After two to six months, no sperm antibodies were being formed in the wives and some pregnancies followed.

Cookout 'Tools' Needed For Summer Barbecue

This summer the tantalizing aromas from backyard cookouts will float through the air and titillate appetites as never before, as more and more families discover the barbecue way of cooking.

When Americans first adopted the barbecue as a favorite form of summer cookery, the equipment used resembled implements used by the cave man. They were often improvised.

Today all this is changed and many a barbecue enthusiast is as particular about the "tools" for his culinary pursuits as the dedicated hunter, fisherman or golfer.

With the barbecue, the man of the house usually comes into his own as the "chef" and like all good craftsmen, wants good tools.

To get ready for your summer cookouts, take inventory and make a list of items needed for a well-equipped barbecue, suggests Anne Winfield, home adviser for F. W. Woolworth Co.

Here is a list of items needed: a good-sized charcoal grill and charcoal starters, a five-piece barbecue tool set, chef's apron, mitt and hat, grill cover, patio lights, a hamburger press, skewers, turners and a set of stackable patio tables.

This might seem to involve a sizable expenditure, but actually all of this equipment can be purchased for less than $40, the Woolworth home adviser says.

With the "tools" for cooking provided for the head of the family, the wife can supply the sauces, condiments, napkins and paper plates to complete the ensemble.

If so, a "cookout" can be held at a moment's notice.

By Bil Keane
(The Family Circus)

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 5, 1922. Until I was ten I drew nothing but criticism. Didn't always spell my first name BIL. My parents named me Bill, but when I started cartooning on the walls, they knocked the "L" out of me.

Graduated from Northeast Catholic High School in Philly where I was art editor of the monthly school magazine. I ain't never went to no college.

Taught myself to draw by imitating my favorite cartoonists in the magazines and newspapers. Three year Army hitch in Southwest Pacific Area. Wound up as a staff sergeant on STARS AND STRIPES IN TOKYO doing a daily cartoon. "AT EASE WITH THE JAPANESE."

Worked as staff cartoonist on the Philadelphia Bulletin from 1946 to 1959 and created a Sunday comic feature, "SILLY PHILLY", which is still read weekly by "nearly everybody" in Philadelphia.

In 1948, remembered my wartime sweetheart in Australia, Thelma Carne, and flew down under where we started our own population explosion: Gayle, Neal, Glen, Chris and Jeff. (Present ages left to right: 11, 9, 7, 4 and 3). Thel passes on everything that comes off my drawing board. She is the most kissable editor I have met. (And a lot prettier than Charlie Blanton).

Started "CHANNEL CHUCKLES" for you fellers in 1954. As of July 7, 1961, I will have drawn 4,001 cartoons on the subject of television without burning out a picture tube.

I use no gag writers and create all my situations myself. I draw entirely with a crow quill pen and work very fast. I rough out six gags at a time, pencil in the six and then ink them as the mail truck is bounding across the desert toward my studio.

"THE FAMILY CIRCUS" came to town in February, 1960. All the gags for this feature are right out of my own home. The characters in the feature are counterparts of the various characters found in abundance lying in disorder in the Keane home. I work with one eye on the drawing board, my other eye on the calendar, and my OTHER eye peering at the back lawn and the antics of the five little Keanes. I just draw what I see.

I do occasional cartoons for the major magazines, though, before syndication, I was selling regularly to the top markets. The Saturday Evening Post prints my "PUN-ABRIDGED DICTIONARY" from time to time as a feature on the Postscripts page.

I like puns. To me they are the number one form of humor. (And there is nothing lower than number one.) In my upcoming Sunday "FAMILY CIRCUS" page, I intend giving a good play to this brand of humor which scores highly with the younger set (and the older set, and those in between).

Lived for years (ten to be exact) in a small mortgaged home in Roslyn, Pennsylvania (just outside of Philadelphia). We packed up our toy boxes and moved to Scottsdale, Arizona, in 1959 where we now live in a LARGE mortgaged home. We like it here among the cactus, sunbeams and land speculators.

Five Narrow Bridges In Bootheel Will Go

JEFFERSON CITY — Five narrow bridges all in a row — long considered nerve-wracking by motorists in the Bootheel area — are on their way to being replaced as a result of a construction contract awarded April 16 by the State Highway Commission, the Missouri Highways News reports.

The 20-foot wide structures are strung out in hopscotch fashion on Route 84 east of Kennett in Dunklin County. They span a series of five drainage ditches between Route U and the Dunklin-Pemiscot County line.

Replacement of the bridges and their accompanying 20-foot roadways has a two - fold purpose: (1) to coordinate highway construction with Corps of Engineers drainage ditch work which would affect stream flow at two of the bridges, and (2) as a safety measure, because the narrow bridges and road have been the scene of numerous traffic accidents.

The Commission awarded a contract for building the five new bridges, plus 1.1 mile of 24-foot portland cement concrete pavement, to Penzel Construction Co., Inc., of Jackson, Mo., on a low bid of $802,442. Bids were opened April 2. The Corps of Engineers will pay $68,973 of the cost.

The project will be built entirely on new location a short distance south of the present roadway. The old route and bridges will serve traffic during the time of construction but the old structures will be removed when the new highway is completed.

The new bridges will be 28 feet wide and their length will vary from 171 feet to 324 feet. Four of them will be continuous I-beam structures and one a continuous plate girder bridge.

Work on the project was to begin in May. The contract allows the contractor 150 working days to complete the job so it may not be finished during this construction season.

The 1.1-mile section being replaced has been the scene of numerous traffic mishaps. Department records show that three deaths, 46 injuries and 72 accidents have occurred in this short stretch since January 1, 1955.

Built in the days of the Model T, the old bridges were constructed as part of a Route 84 contract awarded in 1922. That project extended about seven miles across the width of Dunklin County from the St. Francis River east to the Dunklin-Pemiscot county line, with the exception of a section in Kennett.

Started in 1922, the project was completed in 1926. The pavement put in at that time was portland cement concrete, nine feet wide. The pavement was widened to 19 feet in 1932 and in 1958 it was widened again to 20 feet and surfaced with asphaltic concrete.

An indication of the rise over the years in highway design standards and construction costs is that the entire seven miles of Route 84 in Dunklin County, when built more than 40 years ago, cost only $362,078.

Hearnes Names Group

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Gov. Warren Hearnes has named a blue-ribbon medical and lay group to study ways to improve the state's important public health program, under the direction of the Missouri Division of Health.

The state's chief executive named a select committee, headed by Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, dean of the Missouri University Medical School, composed of medical representatives, professional health workers and two legislator.

Governor Hearnes asked the committee to determine whether proper coordination exists among the state's various health agencies and whether there is economy and efficiency in those activities.

He also asked for recommendations as to what can be done, with or without legislation, to improve Missouri's efforts in the public health field.

One Southeast Missourian, Rep. Tom Baker, D-Stoddard County, was named by the Governor to the study committee. Rep. Baker is charman of the House Public Health and Safety Committee.

Other members, in addition to Dean Wilson and Rep Baker, include Dr. Hector Benoit, Kansas City, chairman of the executive council, Missouri Medical Assn.; Dr. Howard Gross of Kirksville, president-elect of the Missouri Assn. of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons; Dr. Howard Eller, Director of Health, St. Louis County; Dr. John Whitney, regional director, U.S. Public Health Service, Kansas City;

Dr. Henry M. Parrish, chairman of the Department of Community Health and Medical Practice, University of Missouri; Dr. Edward Hassinger, chairman, Missouri Health Assn.; and Sen. William J. Cason of Clinton, chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee.

The commission will study the present operations of the Division of Health, headed until Tuesday by Dr. Henry Hardwicke, who submitted his resignation effective June 1. The chief executive named Dr. L. M. Garner, director of local health services in the Division of Health, to serve as Acting Director, on a temporary basis.

President Urges Less Silver Be Put in Coins

Provide for new dimes and quarters with no silver content. They have about 90 per cent silver now. The coins would have a copper core with an outside layer of a mixture of copper and nickel that would make them acceptable in vending machines rigged to reject slugs with no silver content.

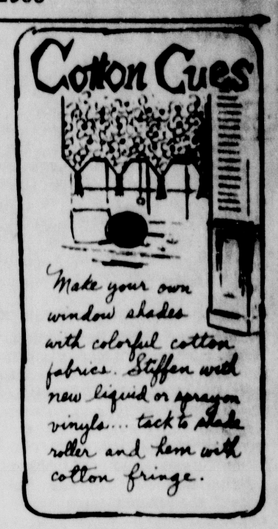

Allow 40 per cent silver content, instead of 90, in a new half dollar.

The new coins will not come out until next year. Meantime, Johnson said that 300 million troy ounces-more than 10,000 tons-of silver will go into coinage this year. This is far more than the total free world output of silver expected for this year.

Oh God, help us to be masters of ourselves that we may be servants of others.

Leisure Is Boredom

In The Globe-Democrat

LBJ the pious has given us the blueprint of what he calls "The Great Society" in which everybody will be educated, everybody working for good wages, every elderly person assured of comfort and car in his advancing years, poverty abolished. He provides an enchanting glimpse of paradise, with everybody satisfied because he will have no worries.

No worries except those related to paying for his Utopian concept, but that is no concern of his as of now. He will balance the budget by bookkeeping legerdemain and sum it up as Progress toward the better life for all.

Of course, we are at war in South Vietnam which costs us a mere $1,500,000 a day and we have commitments around the world by way of wasteful foreign aid and we have a national debt that costs multi-billions annually in interest alone. Forget it! We are rich and can afford anything, which is the basic premise of the New Deal in extended form.

To implement all this he must shake up the executive structure and may add at least a new Cabinet member — a Department for Urban Affairs which might meet a logical need. But he did not mention a Cabinet post that could be useful — a Department of Leisure. It would deal with the problems of those who for various reasons have time on their hands and don't know what to do with it.

For many years the ambition of most American men was to live a life of ease without financial worries after retirement. Women shared in this quest for happiness. Now the problem seems to be that all of us have too much time for leisure and as a result our lives are more complicated.

We witness the development of automation which decreases the work load for most, coupled with the chance of earlier than expected retirement to make room for the next fellow.

Organized labor demands a 35-hour work week. But still fewer hours are demanded and will probably be attained.

As our population expands there are more and more elderly persons, our senior citizens. Many are still able to work at their old jobs but because they are not wanted they must seek occupation elsewhere.

This may be financially rewarding or it may take the form of civic or church endeavor. But this is not always obtainable, perhaps for reasons of health.

For the women, of course, there is more leisure because modern inventions have lessened the work load. In other days the woman did the washing for the family while stooped over a tub and washboard. Now she throws the soiled clothes in a machine which washes and then dries them and can iron them.

Food preparation has been simplified what with packaged frozen articles from soup to dessert. Everything these days must be "instant" and speedy from automobiles to a glass of iced tea.

How to utilize leisure time is a real problem. So serious that books have been written about it and costly studies made — one under way will cost $5,000,000. The Editorial Research Reports raises the question of "whether the American worker really wants more time off than he already has; when given a choice many seem to prefer paid work to free times."

A short time after the AFL-CIO plunked for the 35-hour week, its community service activities section held a conference to discuss the "shorter work week and the constructive use of free time." As one speaker put it: "The real question is not are we going to work less hours, but what are we going to do with our free time." The consensus was that art and culture may be great, "but you can't cram this stuff down people's throats."

Within the past few years numerous Leisure communities have sprung up from coast coast. They purport to offer comfortable and sometimes elegant housing for retired persons, with health and recreation programs that are tempting to the old folks. Some are cooperative.

The majority are honest and give the buyers what they want and need. I know several persons who have invested in these places in California and are well satisfied.

The obvious advice is to investigate thoroughly before signing up. There is even the factor involving your neighbors. Do you wish to spend your last years in the company of old folks exclusively, or do you desire a bit of younger frivolity in your life? Items to be considered.

In this roundabout fashion I come to my own Leisure problem. I have been in retirement from newspaper work for more than four years and although the adjustment from active duty has been a bit difficult, it has not been unpleasant.

I can read as much as I like and I can do some writing, and I try to keep myself in circulation among my friends. I did not crawl into a shell and watch the passing scene with a bilious eye, completely shut off from the outside world.

But — and this is a big one — shortly before last Christmas my doctor gave me a general check-up and made a few discoveries. His prescription was to place me on the inactive list, confined to quarters. My previous exercise habits were sketchy but even these were restricted to walking in my apartment.

I could read as much as I liked, but otherwise I was to lead a completely sedentary life. (Happily the ban has been lifted and I now can do pretty much as I wish, within reasonable bounds.)

During this period of inactivity I had a sample of what complete leisure means. I could read but who cares to sit in an easy chair all his waking hours with book or magazine in hand? Occasional trips to the typewriter helped but were not the answer to boredom.

I had television and radio but the irritations of loud and frequent commercials, blasting bands, shouting announcers introducing the masters of ceremonies and their "wonderful" talent, plus the utterly ridiculous clamor of audience participation — all served to cancel out many programs as satisfying entertainment.

I had believed before that television and radio offered monotonous mediocrity; now I am convinced. This does not apply to all programs.

I can't comment on Westerns because I never look at them, but I was impressed with the vapid results on several shows in which the panelists tried oh! so hard to be oh! so clever. Maybe forced cleverness is an occupational disease.

Some weather reporters still call it "percipitation" with "northerly winds prevailing," and we are still told what to do about our "perspiration" problems.

If we are not a people with the smoothest skin, the cleanest clothes, the best groomed hair, the best explored sinuses, and the fewest tooth cavities, it isn't the fault of the advertisers who plug us ad nauseum.

Why doesn't someone write a singable song anymore? Today's ballads are atrocious recitals of unrequited love, made worse by the dramatic efforts of the singers, men and women, who put "feeling" into their work.

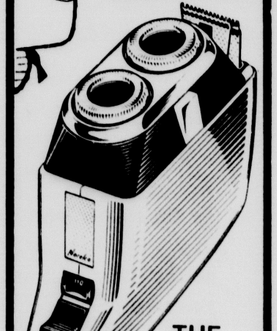

The American Academy of Political and Social Science proposes that the government should take the prime responsibility for the wise use of leisure and that "earnest leisurists should exert pressure on every American state legislature to establish a Department of Leisure for local communities."

The primary goal would be to lead people to practice "the fine art of living." The evils of specialization in sport are deplored and the emphasis should be on activities which evoke pride of doing, togetherness, human understanding, creativeness and a development of the mind and spirit.

My personal leisure experience was a health problem. I shudder to think what complete boredom it would be if it were permanent, which I am assured it is not. I'm afraid any Department of Leisure would find me a tough customer.

A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

Benjamin Franklin Blanton, a newspaper publisher, retired in August 1915 after 42 years with the Monroe County Appeal. In 1919 and 1920, when he was over 80 years old, he began a series of recollections called "When I Was A Boy". His first by-line was "Pappy" Blanton. Later the quotes were taken from the title and the by-line was changed to "B. F. Blanton."

The recollections of the "old Man" (as he also called himself), were recused for students at the Mark Twain Shrine from the files of the "Appeal" because Benjamin F. Blanton was a contemporary of Mark Twain and was raised, like Mark Twain, in the northeast region of Missouri. His recollections help one interested in Mark Twain to understand that boyhood which was so extremely important to Mark Twain. The years of Mark Twain's childhood and adolescence interested Mark Twain more than any other years of his life, and what is now competently believed to be his best work is sourced in his keen memories and images of those Florida and Hannibal years when he was a boy. Benjamin F. Blanton, like Mark Twain, was raised on a farm and in a town on a great river, the Missouri, and learned the printing trade as a boy. However, the printed memories of Benjamin F. Blanton have their main value as personal, state and local history. They were immediately so valued and were widely reprinted at the time they were first published in the "Appeal." They form an original document worth sharing again and again.

Later on his son "Jack" Blanton, when he too was over 80, published a series with the same title. His son's series became deservedly popular and articles from it are being reprinted today. The son's series was written in a different style and with a better mastery of the English language, but they do not reach back to that idyllic, pre - industrial age which fascinated Mark Twain and "Pappy" Blanton. The "Old Man's" articles are of an older time and have a value of their own.

When I Was A Boy

When I was a boy in the country the wives and daughters of farmers spun the yarn, wove the clothes, cut and made the clothes for the entire family. Now farmers' wives raise poultry and ride in automobiles.

When I was a boy there was no threshing machinery in the country and wheat was tramped out by horses and cleaned up with a wheat fan turned by hand. Now we have machines that cuts the bundles, threshes the wheat and stacks the straw.

When I was a boy wheat and all small grain was cut with a cradle and then bound by hand, hard work for men. Now a twelve year old boy or girl sets on a binder, cuts and binds the grain and bunches the bundles ready to put in a shock.

When I was a boy a man plowed his corn with a single horse hitched to a shovel plow and went three times in every row of corn. Now with modern cultivators a man plows two rows every time he crosses the field and does it better.

When I was a boy a ten acre crop of wheat was considered a big crop. Now a thousand acre crop of wheat causes very little talk.

When I was a boy all the cooking was done in an open fire place in pots, kettles and skillets. Now we have ranges, gasoline and oil stoves and electric cookers, even fireless cookers.

When I was a boy people ate corn bread every day in the week except Sunday. Now there is more wheat bread eaten than corn bread, to say nothing of cake, pie and pudding.

When I was a boy there was no ready made clothes for men or women in our county. There were many tailors in the towns but in the country all clothing was made at home.

When I was a boy there was not a sewing machine in the country. Now every family owns one, many families have two, some run by an electric motor.

When I was a boy there was not money enough to hire a girl to ride a horse astride, but times have changed and the modern girl is not so modest as her mother was.

When I was a boy a young man when calling on his girl in the evening was expected to stay for supper and leave about 8 o'clock. Now it is quite different as we all know.

When I was a boy a young man, and many older ones, had a pair of boots that he only wore on Sunday. A pair of boots would last several years for Sunday.

When I was a boy I never heard of paying for digging a grave. The neighbors considered it a duty to dig the grave and would have been insulted if any pay had been offered them.

When I was a boy I never heard of a store coffin. If a person died a neighboring carpenter made a nice walnut coffin for a few dollars. Now coffins are made by a coffin trust and you pay a pretty penny when you use one but you have to have it. It costs too much to die and be buried in the modern way.

When I was a boy ministers generally preached from an hour and a half to two hours and while scoring other denominations, generally preach Christ and Him Crucified. Now our modern preacher talks about 30 minutes on the war or some scientific subject, but toward the end of the sermon says something about the love of Christ for humanity. They are not so much to blame. The people won't go if he holds on more than a half hour and the preacher gives them what they want.

When I was a boy we never heard of a trained nurse. If you got sick the neighbors took care of you, set up with the corpse and buried you, all for nothing. Now if you get sick it will cost you $5 a day for a nurse and $150 to $200 to be planted.

When I was a boy there was no free schools. A teacher would go through the neighborhood getting parents to subscribe so much for a three month school and when that term was out would do so again. School houses were all built of logs with rough puncheon floors and benches. Now there is not a log school house in Central Missouri, but nice modern buildings equipped with every convenience and children love to attend instead of being made to go as of yore.

When I was a boy ministers believed they had a Divine Call to preach the gospel. Now many of them feel called to preach where the salary is greatest. I can hardly blame them.

When I was a boy there were no telegraph instruments, telephones, no steam cars, no autos, no sewing machines, no riding plows, no cultivators and all work was done by human power and endurance.

When I was a boy no one believed a woman had sense enough to teach school or else she would be unable to control the "big boys". Now 90 per cent of the teachers are women and have proven to be more capable of teaching children than were the men teachers.

When I was a boy all steam boats, railroad engines and mills burned wood, not knowing coal would be much better. Now wood has been discarded and coal and electricity have taken the day.

When I was a boy it was a very rare thing to find a family in the country who took a newspaper. I can now remember but one such family. Now almost every family in the country takes but one to a dozen newspapers and periodicals. The result is that people of today are much more intelligent than when I was a boy.

When I was a boy there were no steel pens. All the writing was done with quill pens which the teachers made for the kids. Now no one ever sees a quill pen and most of the writing is done on a typewriter, especially in all county, state and government offices.

When I was a boy there were no coal oil lamps. People in the country used tallow candles and made them at home. Now the present generation never saw a tallow candle but use brilliant oil lamps and electric lights.

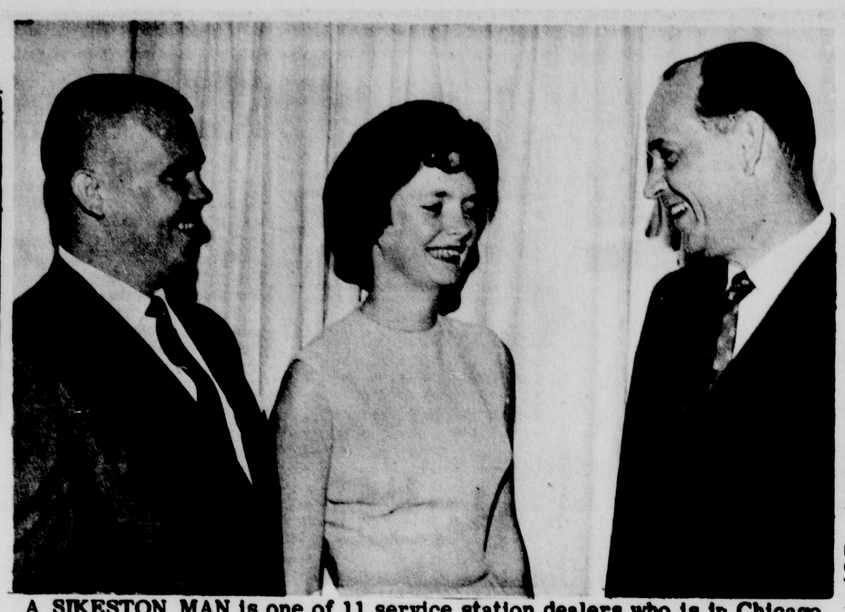

When I was a boy there was darn little of any conveniences, but there were plenty of good warm hearted neighbors ready, day or night, to give a helping hand to a neighbor in need, which is worth more than gold or the fast life we are now living.

A girl's mother had opposed her daughter's marriage to a certain young man, but when the girl went ahead anyway, the mother openly blamed the son-in-law for dragging her poor, young, innocent daughter to the altar, and missed no opportunity to make snide remarks about the marriage. Then the day came when the young couple informed her that they were expecting a baby.

"Oh dear!" she wailed, looking at the young man with indignation. "First you get married, and now this!"

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Every now and then you print a letter proving that behind every successful man is a plucky, game little woman. I'm a man who has succeeded in the asphalt jungle and you are right.

My wife must be credited with a tremendous contribution to my success because she drove me out of the house with her nagging, criticizing, and complaining. The office was infinitely more quiet and peaceful--and I enjoyed my work, so I became a 15-hour-a-day man, six or seven days a week. When a man puts in that kind of time, over a period of years, he's GOT to amount to something.

I hope you will print this letter so my wife can see it. I want her to get the credit she deserves. -- CUSTOM MADE SHIRTS

Dear Custom Made: It's generous of you to want to give your wife all the credit. But I think you deserve some credit, too--not only for your smashing success in business, but also for your miserable failure at home.

Some men who don't want to go home don't want to stay at work either, so they go scouting for trouble and they find it. Presumably you avoided this trap. So what do you want from me--a medal?

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if you think our 12-year-old boy is eating too much. Last night Louis had three helpings of chicken, three helpings of mashed potatoes, two pieces of apple pie and two glasses of milk. He would have taken a third glass of milk if I had said O. K. My husband does not eat nearly so much as this boy and neither does our 14-year-old son.

Yesterday Louis came home from a scout hike and told me he ate three hamburgers and drank three bottles of pop. He boasted "Even the scout master didn't eat that much." Does this sound like a problem? --A MOTHER

Dear Mother: Yes. It sounds like a boy who can't get attention through acceptable channels. Some kids would eat a dishrag dipped in vinegar to capture an audience.

When you make a point that Louis eats more than his father and older brother it suggests that he is overeating to show off. His braggadocio about outeating the scoutmaster is additional evidence.

Take the boy to a physician and let him decide if Louis should be on a diet. And stop talking about how much he eats.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 20-year-old girl who lives at home and attends junior college. Last week I was dialing a friend and ot a wrong number. The party on the line was pleasant, cultured and interesting. This may sound crazy but I couldn't bring myself to hang off so we talked. He said he is 24, single and gainfully employed. We are of the same religious faith although I am a regular and he is not. We have similar interests in art, books and records.

He asked for my name and number so he could call me. I refused but agreed to call HIM again. We've had five conversations and I am so fascinated with his voice that I can't wait until we speak again. To be honest, Ann, I'm dying to meet the fellow. Yes or no?--ANNABELLA

Dear Annabella: Since you are both of the same religious faith, an ideal place to meet is in church.

If he declines the invitation disconnect him permanently. And congratulations for being smart enough NOT to give him your name and number.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

TRIUMPH OF FAITH

Theoretically we know that "He doeth all things well," and that "All things work together for good to them that love God," but it is a triumph of faith which brings great glory to God when, in the time of nature's sorrow, the whole soul of the believer rejoicingly accepts the Lord's dealings. ---J. A NEW COMMUNIST FRONT

I recently received through the mail a warning from J. Edgar Hoover telling of the newest Communist Party front organization designed to attract young Americans. It is called the W. E. B. DuBois Clubs of America.

This organization is in response to the Communist Party's decision of a year ago "that additional measures should be taken to recruit young citizens."

Mr. Hoover warns that "the true face of communism has another mask to wear -- a new disguise calculated to dupe unwary youth."

Mr. Hoover's warning regarding this organization starts out with the words: "Wanted: Young People to Help Bury America. Openings for Pallbearers of Truth and Gravediggers of Democracy. No Prior Experience Necessary."

Mr. Hoover's communication continues:

"A record number of young people are now entering college classrooms to engage in one of man's most noble pursuits: the search for truth through the acquisition of knowledge. In America, this endeavor is as honored as the freedoms which make it possible. It is an undeniable fact that under communism these freedoms do not exist. Communism stipulates the 'truths' its scholars must embrace and spreads its venomous lies and distortions through any available medium."

The above paragraph is followed by the statement: "This academic year will undoubtedly see intensive Communist Party efforts to erect its newest facade on the Nation's campuses to draw young blood for the vampire which is international communism."

In a communication "to all law enforcement officials" Mr. Hoover says:

"As an example of communist deception in action, the DuBois Clubs chose as their official insignia a half white, half black circle encompassing a white hand and a black hand under a dove. Thus the symbols of unity, brotherhood, and peace wave as a banner for an ideology that countenances discord, hate, and violence.

"This organization and its communist parent would have us believe that communism has only one hand — the extended open hand. But a look over their shoulder sees the other hand clasping the Berlin Wall and squeezing freedom's breath from enslaved millions. It is this duplicity that is difficult for young Americans to comprehend. If our young citizens turn an objective, analytical searchlight on this ideology and its organizational arms, they will understand communism for what it is -- a materialistic, godless dogna dedicated to world domination.

"By spreading its poison through young veins, gangrenous communism is attempting to render the future America a quadrangle amputee -- a nation without freedom of speech, press, assembly, and religion. The youth of this Nation, armed with the scalpel of truth, can and must cut this disease from the body of America."

Outdoor Water For Outdoor Convenience

Funny how things go in circles. Years ago, folks had water in their yards because that's where the pump was. Later, you weren't up-to-date unless you had indoor plumbing, so water left the yard and went into the house. Now it's back outside again (don't worry, the indoor plumbing stays).

Today, says the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, families are discovering that outdoor water facilities really make sense. The patio sink is a good example--equipped with hot and cold running water, it gives kitchen convenience right in the yard.

Cooking utensils are washed and rinsed on the spot--a glass of water is an arm's reach away -- sticky fingers are washed in a jiffy--dishes are rinsed before going inside for washing. For cleaning the patio area, too, the sink is a big help. Hot soapy water is there where and when you need it to wash down the table, chairs and other lawn furniture as well as for scrubbing the patio floor.

Another important must for outdoor living is an adequate number of outdoor faucets. Anyone who has struggled with several lengths of hose to sprinkle distant lawn and garden areas can appreciate the value of having a faucet on each side of the house. The Bureau recommends that at least one side also be equipped with a hot water outlet, as well. Hot water near the drive, for instance, is handy for washing the car and other items such as window screens. It's also good for tempering the water in wading pools. For any outdoor hot water needs, in fact, a hot water faucet puts an end to trudging back and forth with pails.

All in all, today's outdoor people need outdoor water. Your qualified plumbing contractor can give you further details concerning modern facilities to make your yard more enjoyable this summer.

The Rev. Harry Fifield tells it on himself. His sermon featured a most involved interpretation of the writings of an Old Testament prophet, a sermon he struggled through and finished with great satisfaction. Then he asked the congregation to request a preferred hymn.

A woman raised her hand and suggested: "Some Day He Will Make It Plain to Me."

When I Was A Boy

I recently received through the mail a warning from J. Edgar Hoover telling of the newest Communist Party front organization designed to attract young Americans. It is called the W. E. B. DuBois Clubs of America.

This organization is in response to the Communist Party's decision of a year ago "that additional measures should be taken to recruit young citizens."

Mr. Hoover warns that "the true face of communism has another mask to wear -- a new disguise calculated to dupe unwary youth."

Mr. Hoover's warning regarding this organization starts out with the words: "Wanted: Young People to Help Bury America. Openings for Pallbearers of Truth and Gravediggers of Democracy. No Prior Experience Necessary."

Mr. Hoover's communication continues:

"A record number of young people are now entering college classrooms to engage in one of man's most noble pursuits: the search for truth through the acquisition of knowledge. In America, this endeavor is as honored as the freedoms which make it possible. It is an undeniable fact that under communism these freedoms do not exist. Communism stipulates the 'truths' its scholars must embrace and spreads its venomous lies and distortions through any available medium."

The above paragraph is followed by the statement: "This academic year will undoubtedly see intensive Communist Party efforts to erect its newest facade on the Nation's campuses to draw young blood for the vampire which is international communism."

In a communication "to all law enforcement officials" Mr. Hoover says:

"As an example of communist deception in action, the DuBois Clubs chose as their official insignia a half white, half black circle encompassing a white hand and a black hand under a dove. Thus the symbols of unity, brotherhood, and peace wave as a banner for an ideology that countenances discord, hate, and violence.

"This organization and its communist parent would have us believe that communism has only one hand — the extended open hand. But a look over their shoulder sees the other hand clasping the Berlin Wall and squeezing freedom's breath from enslaved millions. It is this duplicity that is difficult for young Americans to comprehend. If our young citizens turn an objective, analytical searchlight on this ideology and its organizational arms, they will understand communism for what it is -- a materialistic, godless dogna dedicated to world domination.

"By spreading its poison through young veins, gangrenous communism is attempting to render the future America a quadrangle amputee -- a nation without freedom of speech, press, assembly, and religion. The youth of this Nation, armed with the scalpel of truth, can and must cut this disease from the body of America."

Outdoor Water For Outdoor Convenience

Funny how things go in circles. Years ago, folks had water in their yards because that's where the pump was. Later, you weren't up-to-date unless you had indoor plumbing, so water left the yard and went into the house. Now it's back outside again (don't worry, the indoor plumbing stays).

Today, says the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, families are discovering that outdoor water facilities really make sense. The patio sink is a good example--equipped with hot and cold running water, it gives kitchen convenience right in the yard.

Cooking utensils are washed and rinsed on the spot--a glass of water is an arm's reach away -- sticky fingers are washed in a jiffy--dishes are rinsed before going inside for washing. For cleaning the patio area, too, the sink is a big help. Hot soapy water is there where and when you need it to wash down the table, chairs and other lawn furniture as well as for scrubbing the patio floor.

Another important must for outdoor living is an adequate number of outdoor faucets. Anyone who has struggled with several lengths of hose to sprinkle distant lawn and garden areas can appreciate the value of having a faucet on each side of the house. The Bureau recommends that at least one side also be equipped with a hot water outlet, as well. Hot water near the drive, for instance, is handy for washing the car and other items such as window screens. It's also good for tempering the water in wading pools. For any outdoor hot water needs, in fact, a hot water faucet puts an end to trudging back and forth with pails.

A drinking fountain is another outdoor water convenience. Thirsty youngsters at play can get a drink without tracking through the house. A "child-level" fountain is handy for the children and saves a lot of work for mothers.

All in all, today's outdoor people need outdoor water. Your qualified plumbing contractor can give you further details concerning modern facilities to make your yard more enjoyable this summer.

The Rev. Harry Fifield tells it on himself. His sermon featured a most involved interpretation of the writings of an Old Testament prophet, a sermon he struggled through and finished with great satisfaction. Then he asked the congregation to request a preferred hymn.

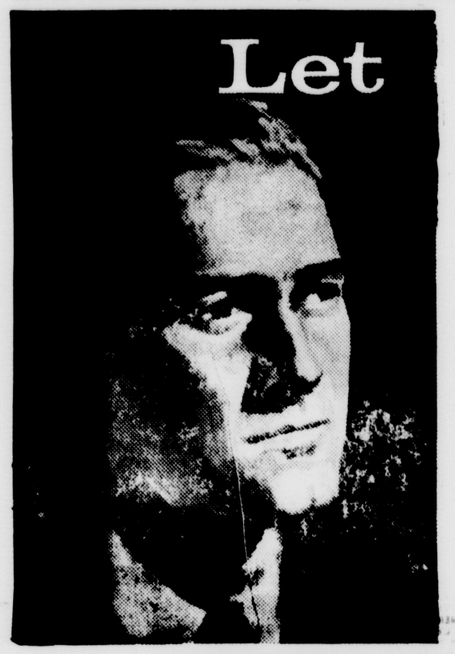

A woman raised her hand and suggested: "Some Day He Will Make It Plain to Me."

"... of the people, by the people, for the people ..."
"We have nothing to fear—but fear itself."
"Let us pray ..."

In the simple words of prayer, in the ritual of worship, in the wise counsel of the man who leads each congregation there is some private, personal meaning for each person who listens. On these words you can build your Faith—a Faith as strong as you will work to make it.

Faith can offer new strength to everyone—especially to you alone.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus. (I Timothy 2:5)

PRAYER: O God, help us each day to live up to the best we know! Grant us wisdom. Give us grace and courage to be at our noblest each moment of this day that we may lead others to Christ. In the Master's name. Amen.

REA Meeting To Elect Officers

The business meeting will begin at 1 p.m. Final plans are to have Assistant Administrator Richard H. Wood from Washington, D. C. as the main speaker to address the meeting at 1:30. During the business meeting, nominating committee reports will be given, a treasurer's report, manager's report, and other matters will come up followed by the election of directors.

Before noon, to reward the people who come early, the Slim Rhodes Show will perform and a quiz program or audience participation contest will be conducted, with 20 prizes for persons who answer the questions correctly. Prizes will be silver dollars.

At 4 p.m. right after the stage show acts of entertainment, the big prizes will be given away as listed on the regular notice mailed out to the members. These prizes are worth the trip to Sikeston alone, as they range from value of $250 down, Manager Stephenson said.

Out of 20 prizes, 20 families will take home a valuable prize plus some 10 or 15 other smaller items for that many families, making a total of 30 to 35 families winning prizes plus the folks who answer the questions right in the quiz program.

According to Stephenson, this has been a very successful year from his reports on revenue and return on the money borrowed from the government. Dividends are larger this year, larger checks will be mailed out to each member next year as a share of the profits.

This year checks are now being mailed out. If the member reading this hasn't received his capital credit dividend check on his $5.00 stock in the Co-operative, then his name is either in the last letters past "H" in the alphabet, or the check was returned to the Co-operative marked "address unknown" for the 1959 payment.

Arrangements have been made for the state association caravan show to come to Sikeston and set up the week prior to June 25, to begin the season here. This 4 act stage show will travel to some 23 other R.E.A.'s this summer in Missouri to help put on annual meetings. The night of June 24 there will be a rehearsal of the actors who will assemble here for their first show together. All of the town folks are invited and all rural families who want to see the show twice are invited. Come and bring the kids the night before at 7:30 p.m., then see it again during the day of June 25.

The co-op manager stated that Richard Wood is scheduled to speak at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Duties in Washington make Richard Wood a busy man and the Cooperatives are fortunate to get him as speaker. Special effort is needed to get out a crowd to hear him. Men are especially invited to come.

Three stands will be set up on the grounds to serve sandwiches and soft drinks and ice cream. With the many fine downtown restaurants able to serve the crowd, members are invited to come early and get registered. The featured speaker in the afternoon is well worth the effort expended to come.

A great amount of pride is being experienced by older members of the board to realize the 28th year in operation, and recall back over the years of progress. Many problems have been thrashed out and many hurdles had to be crossed over in 28 years to make the business a solid asset to the five counties. Electricity on all the farms of a 50-mile square area are more valuable as the years go by, and as the cooperative gets to be a big business. Pride in control of the lines gives a boost to moral and rightly should make every member proud of the service up and down all the roads the same as the board is proud in having a part in making this dream come true.

The 30th anniversary was celebrated last winter for the R.E.A. in general. This year will be our 28th for the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Electric Cooperative, which will celebrate next year as its 29th Anniversary. It was organized in 1937. The first lines were surveyed in 1938 and constructed the latter part of that year into 1939.

The first loan from the government was $157,000 to build 176 miles of line with 402 connected consumers. Progress was slow before the war. All people wanted electricity. Miles and miles of line were signed up but could not be built as rapidly as the demand required. Today the demand is satisfied. The Co-op no longer needs to build very many new lines. The contractor left nine years ago and the Co-op maintenance crews have been handling all short lines that need to be built according to the president.

Over the years additional money was borrowed each year as the Co-op grew in size for expansion. The last eight years money has been needed for heavying up transformers, services and change out of bad poles. The Co-op is self-supporting and the money is being paid back when due to the Government, on schedule, management said. An all out effort is being made to improve the service some each year.

The Cooperative has only seven more years to go to pay off some of the original loans on the "A" Section which were 35 year notes with interest at the rate of 2%. Those interest and principal payments on all of the various notes, dated when needed, when money was drawn from the government, have been paid promptly when due. Some have more principal paid than others, depending upon the age of the note. Generally speaking, the Co-op is in good shape physically, plant has been kept up, bad poles are being changed out each year, heavy lines are being put in and heavy transformers to take care of the larger loads that are being put in. Money is being paid back to the members in form of capital credits as set up in the formula recommended by R.E.A. as a method of distribution of profits to comply with the federal income tax exemption status.

How To Cope With Clammy Closets

Don't put in an emergency call for your plumbing contractor if you see moisture all over your plumbing tanks and pipes this summer. In most cases they haven't sprung a leak, they're just doing something pretty normal for this time of the year -- sweating.

The formation of water beads on tanks and pipes in hot, humid weather is due to the condensation of water vapor in the air. Moisture will form on any container holding liquid cooler than the surrounding atmosphere.

But sweating tanks and pipes aren't something you have to put up with, reports the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau. For instance, there are several ways to prevent moisture dripping from the outside of a water closet (toilet) tank onto the floor:

1. A special type of water closet that features a virtual tank within a tank. Water is stored in the inner tank, and with air space between the two, the outer tank remains at room temperature. At room temperatures, of course, no condensation will form.

2. A mixing valve to warm the water entering the tank to approximate room temperature. The valve mixes water from hot and cold supply piping.

3. Forced air circulation in the bathroom or powder room by means of a ventilating fan. This speeds evaporation, often removing condensation as it forms.

4. Installation of a drip tray under the tank.

Steps 1 and 2 are the best solutions, of course, since they prevent condensation from happening in the first place.

For sweating pipes in basements and utility rooms, there are special types of insulating coverings to prevent dripping. For further information, contact a qualified plumbing contractor.

USDA Salutes Dairy Month

Endorsing the 29th observance of June as Dairy Month, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman this week reminded the Nation's consumers that milk and dairy products have been considered one of mankind's basic foods since earliest times.

The Secretary said, "Nothing takes the place of milk, especially in the diets of growing children. That is why USDA is continually striving to broaden the school lunch and milk programs of the Consumer and Marketing Service."

Secretary Freeman further pointed out that good nutrition in other age groups seldom is possible without adequate amounts of milk and dairy products. Teen-agers grow so swiftly they paramountly need the quickly - available energy and nutrients found in milk.

For older citizens, milk is an economical source of calcium and a good source of protein, he said.

"USDA carries on research and education programs to improve our knowledge of nutrition and to spend this knowledge as widely as possible. Observances such as June as Dairy Month contribute to these objectives by spotlighting nutritious foods that are readily available and reasonably priced," the Secretary pointed out.

There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus. (I Timothy 2:5)

BARBS

BY WALTER C. PARKES

REA Meeting To Elect Officers

The business meeting will begin at 1 p.m. Final plans are to have Assistant Administrator Richard H. Wood from Washington, D. C. as the main speaker to address the meeting at 1:30. During the business meeting, nominating committee reports will be given, a treasurer's report, manager's report, and other matters will come up followed by the election of directors.

Before noon, to reward the people who come early, the Slim Rhodes Show will perform and a quiz program or audience participation contest will be conducted, with 20 prizes for persons who answer the questions correctly. Prizes will be silver dollars.

At 4 p.m. right after the stage show acts of entertainment, the big prizes will be given away as listed on the regular notice mailed out to the members. These prizes are worth the trip to Sikeston alone, as they range from value of $250 down, Manager Stephenson said.

Out of 20 prizes, 20 families will take home a valuable prize plus some 10 or 15 other smaller items for that many families, making a total of 30 to 35 families winning prizes plus the folks who answer the questions right in the quiz program.

According to Stephenson, this has been a very successful year from his reports on revenue and return on the money borrowed from the government. Dividends are larger this year, larger checks will be mailed out to each member next year as a share of the profits.

This year checks are now being mailed out. If the member reading this hasn't received his capital credit dividend check on his $5.00 stock in the Cooperative, then his name is either in the last letters past "H" in the alphabet, or the check was returned to the Cooperative marked "address unknown" for the 1959 payment.

Arrangements have been made for the state association caravan show to come to Sikeston and set up the week prior to June 25, to begin the season here. This 4 act stage show will travel to some 23 other R.E.A.'s this summer in Missouri to help put on annual meetings. The night of June 24 there will be a rehearsal of the actors who will assemble here for their first show together. All of the town folks are invited and all rural families who want to see the show twice are invited. Come and bring the kids the night before at 7:30 p.m., then see it again during the day of June 25.

The co-op manager stated that Richard Wood is scheduled to speak at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Duties in Washington make Richard Wood a busy man and the Cooperatives are fortunate to get him as speaker. Special effort is needed to get out a crowd to hear him. Men are especially invited to come.

Three stands will be set up on the grounds to serve sandwiches and soft drinks and ice cream. With the many fine downtown restaurants able to serve the crowd, members are invited to come early and get registered. The featured speaker in the afternoon is well worth the effort expended to come.

A great amount of pride is being experienced by older members of the board to realize the 28th year in operation, and recall back over the years of progress. Many problems have been thrashed out and many hurdles had to be crossed over in 28 years to make the business a solid asset to the five counties. Electricity on all the farms of a 50-mile square area are more valuable as the years go by, and as the cooperative gets to be a big business. Pride in control of the lines gives a boost to moral and rightly should make every member proud of the service up and down all the roads the same as the board is proud in having a part in making this dream come true.

The 30th anniversary was celebrated last winter for the R.E.A. in general. This year will be our 28th for the Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Electric Cooperative, which will celebrate next year as its 29th Anniversary. It was organized in 1937. The first lines were surveyed in 1938 and constructed the latter part of that year into 1939.

The first loan from the government was $157,000 to build 176 miles of line with 402 connected consumers. Progress was slow before the war. All people wanted electricity. Miles and miles of line were signed up but could not be built as rapidly as the demand required. Today the demand is satisfied. The Co-op no longer needs to build very many new lines. The contractor left nine years ago and the Co-op maintenance crews have been handling all short lines that need to be built according to the president.

Over the years additional money was borrowed each year as the Co-op grew in size for expansion. The last eight years money has been needed for heavying up transformers, services and change out of bad poles. The Co-op is self-supporting and the money is being paid back when due to the Government, on schedule, management said. An all out effort is being made to improve the service some each year.

The Cooperative has only seven more years to go to pay off some of the original loans on the "A" Section which were 35 year notes with interest at the rate of 2%. Those interest and principal payments on all of the various notes, dated when needed, when money was drawn from the government, have been paid promptly when due. Some have more principal paid than others, depending upon the age of the note. Generally speaking, the Co-op is in good shape physically, plant has been kept up, bad poles are being changed out each year, heavy lines are being put in and heavy transformers to take care of the larger loads that are being put in. Money is being paid back to the members in form of capital credits as set up in the formula recommended by R.E.A. as a method of distribution of profits to comply with the federal income tax exemption status.

How To Cope With Clammy Closets

Don't put in an emergency call for your plumbing contractor if you see moisture all over your plumbing tanks and pipes this summer. In most cases they haven't sprung a leak, they're just doing something pretty normal for this time of the year -- sweating.

The formation of water beads on tanks and pipes in hot, humid weather is due to the condensation of water vapor in the air. Moisture will form on any container holding liquid cooler than the surrounding atmosphere.

But sweating tanks and pipes aren't something you have to put up with, reports the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau. For instance, there are several ways to prevent moisture dripping from the outside of a water closet (toilet) tank onto the floor:

1. A special type of water closet that features a virtual tank within a tank. Water is stored in the inner tank, and with air space between the two, the outer tank remains at room temperature. At room temperatures, of course, no condensation will form.
2. A mixing valve to warm the water entering the tank to approximate room temperature. The valve mixes water from hot and cold supply piping.
3. Forced air circulation in the bathroom or powder room by means of a ventilating fan. This speeds evaporation, often removing condensation as it forms.
4. Installation of a drip tray under the tank.

Steps 1 and 2 are the best solutions, of course, since they prevent condensation from happening in the first place.

For sweating pipes in basements and utility rooms, there are special types of insulating coverings to prevent dripping. For further information, contact a qualified plumbing contractor.

USDA Salutes Dairy Month

Endorsing the 29th observance of June as Dairy Month, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman this week reminded the Nation's consumers that milk and dairy products have been considered one of mankind's basic foods since earliest times.

The Secretary said, "Nothing takes the place of milk, especially in the diets of growing children. That is why USDA is continually striving to broaden the school lunch and milk programs of the Consumer and Marketing Service."

Secretary Freeman further pointed out that good nutrition in other age groups seldom is possible without adequate amounts of milk and dairy products. Teen-agers grow so swiftly they paramountly need the quickly - available energy and nutrients found in milk.

For older citizens, milk is an economical source of calcium and a good source of protein, he said.

"USDA carries on research and education programs to improve our knowledge of nutrition and to spend this knowledge as widely as possible. Observances such as June as Dairy Month contribute to these objectives by spotlighting nutritious foods that are readily available and reasonably priced," the Secretary pointed out.

THIS OLD HOUSE

ALMA HOLLY

COMMERCE: What is there about an old house that is so mysterious and challenging? Why can't we walk by with an "I don't care" nonchalance and let the past have its prologue? Why? . . . Well, because most of us have an innate sense of curiosity, and a searching nature that wants to delve into the past and unravel what is finished to see how the pattern was woven.

There is far more than decaying architecture involved in a run down old house. Especially so if it is an old red brick structure bearing a Hawthorn flavor with its seven gables. The house, situated on a selected vantage point atop a high knoll overlooking the Mississippi river, had an ever passing parade at its front door.

Many times at night, excursion boats passed by with gayly emblazoned lights, the sound of the calliope and the tinkle of gay laughter emenating from the ballroom.

Within the house, there are still signs in evidence of its past grandeur. Walking through the rooms, one feels like keeping silent to listen for voices to come from out of the past. Dust forms a grey mask over the furniture but beneath the somber covering, beautiful woods and pink quarried marble protrude. The entrance way, through a heavy four inch - hand crafted door, opens into a large room. A curved stairway rises sturdily to the upper rooms. At midsection it turns and the walls have deep niches where large pieces of statuary once stood. Leaded glass windows on either side of the doorway let in rays of light.

The entrance, really a room in itself, was furnished with black leather chairs skillfully upholstered and tufted in satin smooth leather. A fine old table held, among other useful and decorative objects, a turret-type silver urn with goblets for family use, set in molded positions on either side of the covered pitcher.

The South sitting room, had centered on one wall, an intricately etched black marble fireplace. This room had an alcove beneath the tower of the building. From its three sides one is afforded a view out over the Mississippi.

Across the hallway is another parlor similar to the first. It has the same black marble fireplace with its fine grey-green scroll etching. At one wall an old roll-topped secretary stood. Here the family business was executed and many letters were written with a feather quill pin dipped into the silver encrusted inkwell. A carved molding in each room separated the ceiling from the walls with artistic accent.

From the kitchen came potato biscuits, candies and ginger cakes to send to a young girl who was away in a finishing school.

On warm afternoons, there were often a bevy of the towns' women gathered on the front porch of the old house. Here the gracious hostess served her friends her popular blackberry shrub. Now and then the lively conversation would be interrupted by the passing of a colorful steamboat on the rivers' waters.

The first owner of the house was a Mr. Wathen. It was built by him in 1859. During the Civil War, Union soldiers occupied the dwelling. Then the house was purchased by Mr. W. B. "Uncle Billy" Anderson who used it for his Summer home. When he came down the Mississippi to look after his business and farming interests, he brought his horses and carriage. Mrs. Matthews, a sister of Mr. Anderson, purchased the house in 1925.

Now after many years of being closed and boarded up, the house has been sold and the fine old furniture has gone on to the auction block. It will, perhaps, become scattered to the four winds. An era has passed, but because the house has come into the hands of one who appreciates its past dignity and beauty, it will again lift its head in pride and live anew through restoration. What a pity the furnishings could not stay intact! But, then who knows -- they may slowly find their way back.

Lesson Of Three Georges

JENKIN LLOYD JONES in The Commercial Appeal

Eastbound near Miles City, Mont. - I have just come down from the dome car where I have been watching the blue water boiling beneath the heaving ice of the Yellowstone River and the winter sunshine glinting off the deep snow.

A few minutes ago, just east of Forsyth, the beautiful train roared over a small creek. My map tells me it is the Rosebud. And it puts me in mind of the Civil War and three Union generals -- all named George -- from whom, perhaps, a lesson can be drawn.

George Armstrong Custer had a passion for glory. Only 22 at the outbreak of the war he hurried from West Point to Virginia and began a hell-for-leather career as a cavalry officer. He chafed at restraint. He exceeded orders. But gradually the word got around. Custer was a thunderbolt.

At Gettysburg, Custer made the Michigan cavalry famous. They promoted him to brevet brigadier general at 24. Sheridan gave him his head in the Wilderness and Shenandoah campaigns. At Cedar Creek and Five Forks he was superb.

GALLED BY THE GARRISON HE BUTCHERED INDIANS

Peace found a frustrated Custer busted back to lieutenant colonel in the regular army. Garrison life galled him. So it was with joy that he received orders to round up the Cheyennes in Western Oklahoma in 1868. The Battle of the Washita was an outrage. The Seventh Cavalry butchered old men and rode down squealing squaws.

Eight years of inaction followed. Then came a new big chance. Ordered out to scout hostile Sioux in Montana he rode joyously up the Tongue on June 23, 1876, crossed to the valley of the Rosebud, and the next day on a ridge overlooking the Little Big Horn he took on Sitting Bull and about 5,000 Indians. Custer won glory at last, as he and his 264 men died.

McCLELLAN WAS BRILLIANT BUT TOO HESITANT

The second George -- George Brinton McClellan - made none of Custer's mistakes. He was a brilliant organizer. He took raw hordes of skylarking volunteers and sullen draftees and drilled them into an army.

He went ever prepared for disaster. His troops idolized him. He could do everything --except win battles.

McClellan always accepted the gloomiest rumor. He was so afraid of defeat that he never committed his full force. At Antietam, even while holding in his hand Lee's whole battle plan, he hesitated. Outnumbering Lee by two-to-one he left two corps in reserve, and the battle was close to a draw. Lincoln finally fired him.

The third George was George Henry Thomas, a Southern West Pointer who stayed with the Union Army. His promotions were slow because Northern politicians distrusted his loyalty. But he had to rise. He was just about the best general the Union had.

He could be as methodical as McClellan, as fast as Custer. He saved the center at Stone's River and was "the Rock of Chickamauga." At Nashville Thomas waited for the ice-covered countryside to clear while Grant, from Virginia, bombarded him with demands for immediate action and even ordered his replacement. But when "Old Pap" moved at last the army of Hood vanished in two days. Nashville has been described as the best planned and executed battle of the war.

SAME KIND OF STRUGGLE IS IN EVERY MAN

Now, it might be said that every man lives a struggle in which the Custer and the McClellan inside him jaw and argue from the moment he stands in his playpen to the hour of his death. Man is torn between the desire to do and the fear of doing. He wants glory. He fears defeat.

You'll never get rich putting your money out at four per cent in a savings account. You won't lose your money either. You'll never become president of the firm by being mousy and agreeable and trying not to attract attention. But you won't get caught up in power struggles and the chances of being fired are lessened.

Your defensive George McClellan nature will preserve much of your resources in the face of disaster. But only by your aggressive George Custer nature will you ever win at anything more than penny ante.

The ideal man is the Thomas man. He is the man who will spare no effort to get ready and will not move until he is. Then he can roar back from his own Nashvilles, shouting, as George Thomas did:

"Dammit to hell, I told you we could lick'em!"

Executive Vice President
Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy.

Enactment by Congress of the bill, H. R. 3818, February 18, removing the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, constitutes a dangerous disservice to the people of this nation and may result in increased foreign demands for our gold. Neither this amendment nor others to reduce or remove reserve requirements of Federal Reserve banks has a valid defense.

The removal of the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits eliminated the reserve against our most potent currency.

Federal Reserve notes, against which reserve requirements are to be maintained at least for the present, constitute a small element in the reserves of member banks. But the deposits in Federal Reserve banks are largely reserves of member banks which reserves support the credit expansion of member banks.

The enacted bill opens the way to a practically unlimited expansion of deposit currency in this country and to a radical depreciation of the value of our dollar. Monetization of the national debt can take place without any effective limitation -- a procedure used by Germany up to the collapse in the value of her mark in 1923.

Proposals offered to elminate the gold certificate reserve requirements against both note and deposit liabilities of the federal Reserve banks have not thus far been converted into law. Such a procedure would open the way to unrestrained monetization of the national debt and to the reduction of the notes and deposits of Federal Reserve banks to the status of fiat currency, the weakest and most dangerous type of money known to man.

Still other proposals were made recently which point toward a weakening in our currency structure and which would open the way to a still greater monetization of the national debt and a further depreciation in the purchasing power of our dollar.

The testimony of Secretary of the Treasury, who advocated enactment of the proposal to remove the gold certificate requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, reveals that it is, in essence, a case of attempting to convert black into white or evil into virtue.

In no respect was the fundamental question faced as to whether the relatively low ratio of our monetary gold stock to nongold money and deposits could properly be expected to correct itself if our currency were given the quality of integrity.

Instead, his recommendation was in behlaf of a further expansion of money and deposits to foster "healthy economic growth" and "to accommodate the monetary and credit needs of a strong and growing economy with stable prices," with endorsement of a proposal designed to weaken our currency structure still further.

Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System likewise supported the bill to remove the reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank notes.

The statement was made by Secretary of the Treasury that "certainly, it is essential that this country . . . continue to hold a large gold stock, and our policies are directed toward that end." The fact is that our national government's policies, especially since February, 1958, have not been directed to that end. Nor were his recommendations supporting a proposal to weaken our currency structure still further.

The Secretary characterized our gold certificate requirements for our Federal Reserve banks as "essentially arbitrary and outmoded." That contention is a common theme of advocates of a cheaper currency, especially advocates of fiat money.

"The current gold cover requirement," said the Secretary, "is an outgrowth of a much earlier period in our monetary history, and can be fully understood only in the context of circumstances that have long since vanished."

Andrew Dickson White threw some light on the age of that variety of argument in his Fiat Money Inflation In France (D. Appleton-Century Co. edition, New York, 1933) as he described the French experience with fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century. After describing the sad consequences flowing from France's use of fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century, White issued the following well-grounded warning:

"Every other attempt of the same kind in human history, under whatever circumstances, has reached similar results in kind if not in degree."

Advocating further currency expansion by means of removing the reserve requirement against deposits in Federal Reserve banks is in nature as old and as fallacious as the major contentions which commonly accompany the arguments for fiat money.

Under our present arrangements, our nongold money and credit lack the quality of integrity domestically.

The people of this country have lost a valuable property right in not being able to obtain and to hold gold as they may desire.

Because they have lost the right to demand redemption of so-called "promises to pay," they cannot place any effective restraints on the Treasury or banks in the issuance of such "promises." A consequence of fundamental importance is that our people have lost all effective control over the government's use of the public purse.

The gold certificate reserve requirement placed a needed and proper restriction on the issuance of Federal Reserve notes and deposits. Without such a requirement, paper money and bank deposits become fiat currency in nature.

The great need of our people in the field of money today is that our currency be given the quality of integrity. And this means that all varieties of our dollars should be freely exchangeable at the parity rate of $35 per fine ounce of gold to accommodate the needs and desires of all holders of dollars. What is declared to be a standard dollar should be usuable by our people.

The legal requirements for redemption of non-gold and non-silver money, as distinguished from freedom or exchangeability, should be in correct form to enforce the responsibility of the agencies which issue non-gold an nonsilver money and credit -- for example, requirements that there be 100 per cent gold against gold certificates, 100 per cent silver against silver certificates, a fractional percentage of gold or silver against U. S. notes, a fractional percentage of gold and silver against Federal Reserve notes and deposits.

Should our money and deposits be given the quality of integrity, a great proportion of the $12,698,000,000 of gold held under earmark for foreign account at end of December, 1964, could be expected to be returned to our monetary gold stock and there should be a considerable exportation of gold to this country.

In Thailand, Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver, Jr., attended a boxing match between a Siamese and a Peace Corpsman. "It ended in a draw," Shriver reported. "For a while I was afraid it was going to end in a Thai."

You may think so. But you could be mistaken. The truth is that in many schools, vigorous physical education activities that develop strength, flexibility, agility and endurance are not scheduled as an integral part of the daily program.

And this is one reason why the physical fitness of our children has declined. In fact, recent pilot studies showed that almost half of the youngsters tested proved to be physically under par. Isn't this reason enough for more emphasis on an organized program of physical education?

Fortunately, a program has been developed that will get our children back in shape. It is a minimum program, and it can be carried out in any school—at very little cost and with a minimum of time.

All it takes is 15 minutes of vigorous activity every day during the physical education period. In schools that have adopted such a daily program, boys and girls have shown a remarkable improvement in their physical status.

Certainly, you want your child to develop his body as well as his mind. So, why not find out about the present physical education program in your child's school?

Take it up at your next PTA meeting. Insist that a full 15 minutes every day is spent in vigorous, body-building activities as part of a scheduled program.

The house, situated on a selected vantage point atop a high knoll overlooking the Mississippi river, had an ever passing parade at its front door.

Many times at night, excursion boats passed by with gayly emblazoned lights, the sound of the calliope and the tinkle of gay laughter emenating from the ballroom.

Within the house, there are still signs in evidence of its past grandeur. Walking through the rooms, one feels like keeping silent to listen for voices to come from out of the past. Dust forms a grey mask over the furniture but beneath the somber covering, beautiful woods and pink quarried marble protrude. The entrance way, through a heavy four inch - hand crafted door, opens into a large room. A curved stairway rises sturdily to the upper rooms. At midsection it turns and the walls have deep niches where large pieces of statuary once stood. Leaded glass windows on either side of the doorway let in rays of light.

The entrance, really a room in itself, was furnished with black leather chairs skillfully upholstered and tufted in satin smooth leather. A fine old table held, among other useful and decorative objects, a turret-type silver urn with goblets for family use, set in molded positions on either side of the covered pitcher.

The South sitting room, had centered on one wall, an intricately etched black marble fireplace. This room had an alcove beneath the tower of the building. From its three sides one is afforded a view out over the Mississippi.

Across the hallway is another parlor similar to the first. It has the same black marble fireplace with its fine grey-green scroll etching. At one wall an old roll-topped secretary stood. Here the family business was executed and many letters were written with a feather quill pin dipped into the silver encrusted inkwell. A carved molding in each room separated the ceiling from the walls with artistic accent.

From the kitchen came potato biscuits, candies and ginger cakes to send to a young girl who was away in a finishing school.

On warm afternoons, there were often a bevy of the towns' women gathered on the front porch of the old house. Here the gracious hostess served her friends her popular blackberry shrub. Now and then the lively conversation would be interrupted by the passing of a colorful steamboat on the rivers' waters.

The first owner of the house was a Mr. Wathen. It was built by him in 1859. During the Civil War, Union soldiers occupied the dwelling. Then the house was purchased by Mr. W. B. "Uncle Billy" Anderson who used it for his Summer home. When he came down the Mississippi to look after his business and farming interests, he brought his horses and carriage. Mrs. Matthews, a sister of Mr. Anderson, purchased the house in 1925.

Now after many years of being closed and boarded up, the house has been sold and the fine old furniture has gone on to the auction block. It will, perhaps, become scattered to the four winds. An era has passed, but because the house has come into the hands of one who appreciates its past dignity and beauty, it will again lift its head in pride and live anew through restoration. What a pity the furnishings could not stay intact! But, then who knows -- they may slowly find their way back.

Lesson Of Three Georges

JENKIN LLOYD JONES in The Commercial Appeal

Eastbound near Miles City, Mont. - I have just come down from the dome car where I have been watching the blue water boiling beneath the heaving ice of the Yellowstone River and the winter sunshine glinting off the deep snow.

A few minutes ago, just east of Forsyth, the beautiful train roared over a small creek. My map tells me it is the Rosebud. And it puts me in mind of the Civil War and three Union generals -- all named George -- from whom, perhaps, a lesson can be drawn.

George Armstrong Custer had a passion for glory. Only 22 at the outbreak of the war he hurried from West Point to Virginia and began a hell-for-leather career as a cavalry officer. He chafed at restraint. He exceeded orders. But gradually the word got around. Custer was a thunderbolt.

At Gettysburg, Custer made the Michigan cavalry famous. They promoted him to brevet brigadier general at 24. Sheridan gave him his head in the Wilderness and Shenandoah campaigns. At Cedar Creek and Five Forks he was superb.

GALLED BY THE GARRISON HE BUTCHERED INDIANS

Peace found a frustrated Custer busted back to lieutenant colonel in the regular army. Garrison life galled him. So it was with joy that he received orders to round up the Cheyennes in Western Oklahoma in 1868. The Battle of the Washita was an outrage. The Seventh Cavalry butchered old men and rode down squealing squaws.

Eight years of inaction followed. Then came a new big chance. Ordered out to scout hostile Sioux in Montana he rode joyously up the Tongue on June 23, 1876, crossed to the valley of the Rosebud, and the next day on a ridge overlooking the Little Big Horn he took on Sitting Bull and about 5,000 Indians. Custer won glory at last, as he and his 264 men died.

McCLELLAN WAS BRILLIANT BUT TOO HESITANT

The second George -- George Brinton McClellan - made none of Custer's mistakes. He was a brilliant organizer. He took raw hordes of skylarking volunteers and sullen draftees and drilled them into an army.

He went ever prepared for disaster. His troops idolized him. He could do everything --except win battles.

McClellan always accepted the gloomiest rumor. He was so afraid of defeat that he never committed his full force. At Antietam, even while holding in his hand Lee's whole battle plan, he hesitated. Outnumbering Lee by two-to-one he left two corps in reserve, and the battle was close to a draw. Lincoln finally fired him.

The third George was George Henry Thomas, a Southern West Pointer who stayed with the Union Army. His promotions were slow because Northern politicians distrusted his loyalty. But he had to rise. He was just about the best general the Union had.

He could be as methodical as McClellan, as fast as Custer. He saved the center at Stone's River and was "the Rock of Chickamauga." At Nashville Thomas waited for the ice-covered countryside to clear while Grant, from Virginia, bombarded him with demands for immediate action and even ordered his replacement. But when "Old Pap" moved at last the army of Hood vanished in two days. Nashville has been described as the best planned and executed battle of the war.

SAME KIND OF STRUGGLE IS IN EVERY MAN

Now, it might be said that every man lives a struggle in which the Custer and the McClellan inside him jaw and argue from the moment he stands in his playpen to the hour of his death. Man is torn between the desire to do and the fear of doing. He wants glory. He fears defeat.

You'll never get rich putting your money out at four per cent in a savings account. You won't lose your money either. You'll never become president of the firm by being mousy and agreeable and trying not to attract attention. But you won't get caught up in power struggles and the chances of being fired are lessened.

Your defensive George McClellan nature will preserve much of your resources in the face of disaster. But only by your aggressive George Custer nature will you ever win at anything more than penny ante.

The ideal man is the Thomas man. He is the man who will spare no effort to get ready and will not move until he is. Then he can roar back from his own Nashvilles, shouting, as George Thomas did:

"Dammit to hell, I told you we could lick 'em!"

Executive Vice President
Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy.

Enactment by Congress of the bill, H. R. 3818, February 18, removing the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, constitutes a dangerous disservice to the people of this nation and may result in increased foreign demands for our gold. Neither this amendment nor others to reduce or remove reserve requirements of Federal Reserve banks has a valid defense.

The removal of the gold certificate reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits eliminated the reserve against our most potent currency.

Federal Reserve notes, against which reserve requirements are to be maintained at least for the present, constitute a small element in the reserves of member banks. But the deposits in Federal Reserve banks are largely reserves of member banks which reserves support the credit expansion of member banks.

The enacted bill opens the way to a practically unlimited expansion of deposit currency in this country and to a radical depreciation of the value of our dollar. Monetization of the national debt can take place without any effective limitation -- a procedure used by Germany up to the collapse in the value of her mark in 1923.

Proposals offered to elminate the gold certificate reserve requirements against both note and deposit liabilities of the federal Reserve banks have not thus far been converted into law. Such a procedure would open the way to unrestrained monetization of the national debt and to the reduction of the notes and deposits of Federal Reserve banks to the status of fiat currency, the weakest and most dangerous type of money known to man.

Still other proposals were made recently which point toward a weakening in our currency structure and which would open the way to a still greater monetization of the national debt and a further depreciation in the purchasing power of our dollar.

The testimony of Secretary of the Treasury, who advocated enactment of the proposal to remove the gold certificate requirement against Federal Reserve bank deposits, reveals that it is, in essence, a case of attempting to convert black into white or evil into virtue.

In no respect was the fundamental question faced as to whether the relatively low ratio of our monetary gold stock to nongold money and deposits could properly be expected to correct itself if our currency were given the quality of integrity.

Instead, his recommendation was in behlaf of a further expansion of money and deposits to foster "healthy economic growth" and "to accommodate the monetary and credit needs of a strong and growing economy with stable prices," with endorsement of a proposal designed to weaken our currency structure still further.

Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System likewise supported the bill to remove the reserve requirement against Federal Reserve bank notes.

The statement was made by Secretary of the Treasury that "certainly, it is essential that this country . . . continue to hold a large gold stock, and our policies are directed toward that end." The fact is that our national government's policies, especially since February, 1958, have not been directed to that end. Nor were his recommendations supporting a proposal to weaken our currency structure still further.

The Secretary characterized our gold certificate requirements for our Federal Reserve banks as "essentially arbitrary and outmoded." That contention is a common theme of advocates of a cheaper currency, especially advocates of fiat money.

"The current gold cover requirement," said the Secretary, "is an outgrowth of a much earlier period in our monetary history, and can be fully understood only in the context of circumstances that have long since vanished."

Andrew Dickson White threw some light on the age of that variety of argument in his Fiat Money Inflation In France (D. Appleton-Century Co. edition, New York, 1933) as he described the French experience with fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century. After describing the sad consequences flowing from France's use of fiat money during the last decade of the 18th century, White issued the following well-grounded warning:

"Every other attempt of the same kind in human history, under whatever circumstances, has reached similar results in kind if not in degree."

Advocating further currency expansion by means of removing the reserve requirement against deposits in Federal Reserve banks is in nature as old and as fallacious as the major contentions which commonly accompany the arguments for fiat money.

Under our present arrangements, our nongold money and credit lack the quality of integrity domestically.

The people of this country have lost a valuable property right in not being able to obtain and to hold gold as they may desire.

Because they have lost the right to demand redemption of so-called "promises to pay," they cannot place any effective restraints on the Treasury or banks in the issuance of such "promises." A consequence of fundamental importance is that our people have lost all effective control over the government's use of the public purse.

The gold certificate reserve requirement placed a needed and proper restriction on the issuance of Federal Reserve notes and deposits. Without such a requirement, paper money and bank deposits become fiat currency in nature.

The great need of our people in the field of money today is that our currency be given the quality of integrity. And this means that all varieties of our dollars should be freely exchangeable at the parity rate of $35 per fine ounce of gold to accommodate the needs and desires of all holders of dollars. What is declared to be a standard dollar should be usuable by our people.

The legal requirements for redemption of non-gold and nonsilver money, as distinguished from freedom or exchangeability, should be in correct form to enforce the responsibility of the agencies which issue nongold an nonsilver money and credit -- for example, requirements that there be 100 per cent gold against gold certificates, 100 per cent silver against silver certificates, a fractional percentage of gold or silver against U. S. notes, a fractional percentage of gold and silver against Federal Reserve notes and deposits.

Should our money and deposits be given the quality of integrity, a great proportion of the $12,698,000,000 of gold held under earmark for foreign account at end of December, 1964, could be expected to be returned to our monetary gold stock and there should be a considerable exportation of gold to this country.

In Thailand, Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver, Jr., attended a boxing match between a Siamese and a Peace Corpsman. "It ended in a draw," Shriver reported. "For a while I was afraid it was going to end in a Thai."

You may think so. But you could be mistaken. The truth is that in many schools, vigorous physical education activities that develop strength, flexibility, agility and endurance are not scheduled as an integral part of the daily program.

And this is one reason why the physical fitness of our children has declined. In fact, recent pilot studies showed that almost half of the youngsters tested proved to be physically under par. Isn't this reason enough for more emphasis on an organized program of physical education?

Fortunately, a program has been developed that will get our children back in shape. It is a minimum program, and it can be carried out in any school—at very little cost and with a minimum of time.

All it takes is 15 minutes of vigorous activity every day during the physical education period. In schools that have adopted such a daily program, boys and girls have shown a remarkable improvement in their physical status.

Certainly, you want your child to develop his body as well as his mind. So, why not find out about the present physical education program in your child's school?

Take it up at your next PTA meeting. Insist that a full 15 minutes every day is spent in vigorous, body-building activities as part of a scheduled program.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1944, the first units of the U. S. 5th and British 8th armies entered Rome. Most of the troops were held on the outskirts until the next day.

In 1888, New York State established electrocution as the death penalty.

In 1896, Henry Ford made the first successful trial run in his automobile.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced that his relations with Soviet Premier Josef Stalin were excellent.

Ten years ago - East German leader Walter Ulbricht reported that a conference at Warsaw, Poland, had set up a committee to coordinate policies of Communist nations from the Elbe River to the Pacific.

Five years ago - The State Department accused Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro of conducting an intensive official campaign of slander against the United States.

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, St. Thomas, V. I. AP--This tropic island gave Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson a warm welcome on her first visit here and the governor added "the keys to our hearts."

In Emancipation Gardens where slaves were freed more than a centruy ago, a crowd of about 7,000 turned out to cheer the First Lady as she noted "the impressive way equality was translated into reality in these islands."

TIPS ON FOOD WASTE DISPOSERS

Before having your plumbing contractor install a food waste disposer in your sink, have him clean out the drain. Once the drain is clear of past accumulations, you need worry no more. The natural scouring action of ground wastes by the disposer will keep the drain clean.

which McDivitt's 8-year-old son Mike plays, defeated the Falcons, 3-2. McDivitt was asleep at the time the word was relayed.

The plan had been disrupted during the first three orbits when McDivitt made a futile attempt to catch and rendezvous with another satellite — the burned-out third stage of the Titan 2 rocket that boosted them into orbit.

Hodge said that throughout the night, the Gemini 4 was allowed to drift on its orbital path without any expenditure of fuel.

Hodge said two orbit-changing maneuvers would be dropped from the flight and there would be some curtailment of scientific experiments that require spacecraft maneuvering.

He said McDivitt and White were getting used to sleeping in space after initial "tossing and turning" periods. Each slept well on their second four-hour slumber period, he reported.
